4 Good Men, All Dry.
Helping the Farmer.
Just a Little Usury.
Lord Terrington's Error.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

HOOVER and Smith, both on a dry platform. Wet Democrats will be told: "Don't worry, we don't really mean that dry stuff."

Wet Republicans will be asked: "Have we Republicans ever acted dry? Have you had any trouble getting what you wanted?"

Two dry platforms with a wet understanding in the program.

DEMOCRATS want to help farmers and expect farmers to help them. They promise that what the farmers cannot sell in the United States shall be sold abroad. But "the cost of surplus marketing will be put on the commodity."

THIS means that what it costs to sell surplus products in Europe will be charged to the farmer.

After he has paid his government's charges for foreign marketing, he will agree with the power trust that our government isn't capable or honest enough to engage in business successfully.

THE Bible warns us against usury. See Deuteronomy 23—21: "Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother; usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of anything that is lent upon usury."

THAT did not keep big money gentlemen from raising the price of "call money" in Wall Street to 8 per cent yesterday. They may have a private understanding with Providence.

STRANGELY, 8 per cent money did not keep prices from going up. Our laws against usury remind you of prohibition laws. What doesn't suit the big fellows doesn't "go."

LORD TERRINGTON, British peer, stole $300,000, admits it and goes to jail for four years. That happens in Britain.

Had the gentleman come to this country and made it $30,000,000 instead of $300,000, he would be on his private car or yacht now, and able lawyers would be denouncing anybody trying to interfere with him.

Or, as Senator Nye puts it, "you can't convict $100,000,000."

THE platform promises to give the Philippine Islands back to the Filipinos, of whom the platform says: "They have succeeded in maintaining a stable government."

The Democrats might give the Philippines to the Japanese. They won't give them to the Filipinos, because the Filipinos couldn't take them.

Those admirable little gentlemen have not "succeeded in maintaining a stable government."

The United States has maintained it for them, which is different. However, platforms must not be taken too literally.

SENATOR NORRIS of Nebraska, who forced Congress to admit that the people of the United States might own their own Muscle Shoals plant, is out against the Democratic platform. He doesn't see how any third party could be organized. Which means that he and millions of others that think the farmer has been badly treated, intend to remain Republican none the less.

THE Democratic platform promises to "outlaw war." Women are delighted with that. They hope it will work better than the law to outlaw whisky. That didn't work well, and unfortunately whisky and war are brothers. To get rid of either you must do more than write words in a platform or law book, YOU MUST CHANGE MEN.

THE Democraitc nomination is a step in the right direction toward tolerance in religious matters. Thomas Jefferson was determined that this government should not support, recognize or discriminate against any religion. The nomination of Gov. Smith is a step toward realization of plans made by those that established this government.

SMITH TO TOUR AS WET

International News Service.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30. Confident of electing the Smith-Robinson ticket in November, democracy's militant and harmonious hosts are headed for home today to start the "campaign of the century."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, chosen as Smith's running mate on the first ballot by 1,032 1-6 out of the 1,100 votes of the convention, was picked because of his forensic power, because of his popularity in the South and border states and because of his oft-expressed approval of law enforcement.

QUICK ADJOURNMENT

The national convention adjourned within one minute after it had received from Gov. Smith a bold and frank declaration that he will campaign the country on a personal platform for modification of the prohibition laws.

In his acceptance telegram, Gov. Smith stated that if elected he would enforce the Constitution and laws without reservation or evasion, but immediately followed this with a reiteration of his belief that there should be fundamental changes in the legislative provisions for prohibition.

"While I fully appreciate," he said, "that these changes can only

SUN-TELE AIRMAN CITED

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP.)—Master Sergt. William J. Bennett, Army Air Corps, of Fairfield, O., today was commended by Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps, for courage in the recent national elimination balloon race.

Bennett, a pilot on "The Sun-Tele Pittsburgher" balloon, with Walter Chambers, aviation editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, offered to sacrifice himself to save Chambers when the balloon encountered a severe storm and was hurtled down 7,000 feet to near the ground.

In a letter to Gen. Fechet, Chambers said: "I hope you can cite him and his commanding officer for the unexampled bravery and unselfishness with which he faced what everyone now deems was the almost certainty of death.

"I feel that Sergt. Bennett's heroic conduct warrants my telling you that as we entered this storm he made me put on my parachute without telling me what we were getting into, and that in less than 11 minutes we had been swept to an altitude of 7,000 feet and hurled again to the ground. Finally, looking after me and throwing ballast from the balloon, which went up instead of down.

JAWORSKI ELUDES TRAP

FLEES AS OFFICERS AWAIT BOAT

International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 30.—The steamer Western States, which docked at the Navy pier here at 9:30 this morning, held no trace of Paul Jaworski, Pennsylvania murderer.

Jaworski, said in a radiogram from Sault Ste. Marie to have been aboard the boat, was believed by Chicago officers to have left the ship at St. Ignace, Mich., and later fled to Canada. Police said he was accompanied by a woman in his escape.

Jaworski, wanted for half a dozen murders and under sentence of death in Pennsylvania, shot his way out of a Pittsburgh jail several months ago.

DETROIT, June 29.—Two Detroit detectives are waiting at a Chicago dock to arrest a man believed to be Paul Jaworski, notorious bandit chieftain, when he steps from the D. & C. steamer Western States today.

Jaworski is suspected of the death of Patrolman George Barstad, who died June 25 from gunshot wounds received when a gang believed to have been led by Jaworski held up the Detroit News business office and escaped with $25,000.

Wanted "dead or alive," there are rewards totaling $15,000 outstanding for Jaworski, who with Jack Vasbinder, escaped from the Allegheny County jail at Pittsburgh, Pa. amid pistol fire.

8 PLACES ARE RAIDED IN STRIP WAR

Strip political warfare broke through the uncertain harmony last night when constables from Alderman George Anderson's office raided choice spots in the Hill district and downtown.

The raids were described by so-called wiseacres as the answer of Owen McManus, once an employe in Anderson's office, to his fistic and political differences with Inspector Joseph Elsner, of the Strip. McManus, Republican chairman of the Second Ward, suffered a bruised head and a $25 fine a few days ago in tangling with Elsner.

It was regarded as extremely interesting that the raids were led by McManus' brother, Constable James McManus.

Among the places raided were the Waiters Club, 1013 Liberty avenue; Oaks Club, 929 Liberty avenue; Martin Noon's, Seventh street; Lafayette Hotel, Liberty avenue; Sutton's Cafe, 518 Wylie avenue; The Owls, 644 Penn avenue; Lancer's, 805 Wylie avenue; Tenth Street Hotel.

The raiding constables used John Doe warrants and sought booze and slot machines. None of the proprietors was arrested, but the constables promised that warrants would be served on them.

SICK WOMAN PERISHES WHEN HOME IS BURNED

BALTIMORE, June 30.—(AP.)—Trapped by flames which destroyed her cottage and life-savings of her husband, Mrs. Anna Jones, an invalid, was burned to death yesterday in her home at Linthicum Heights. Firemen had fought the blaze for nearly a half hour before they learned that the woman was still in the house.

CAKE AT WEDDING POISONS EIGHT

Eight persons are suffering from ptomaine poisoning from eating iced cakes purchased for a wedding celebration at the home of Peter Capozzoli, 8015 Ferndale street, police were notified today.

The celebration followed the marriage, last Thursday morning, of Mary Capozzoli and Filomen Errico in the bride's home at the Ferndale street address.

Peter Capozzoli, 53, father of the bride, employed by the city Bureau of Highways and Sewers, ate several cakes for lunch yesterday and was found in agony in a toolshed near where he was working in the Point Breeze district. He was removed to his home.

Others stricken were Mrs. Peter Capozzoli, 53; a daughter, Rose, 18; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Anna Capozzoli, 3427 Ward street; her daughter, Anetta, 6; Mary Somma, 30, of 8002 Frankstown avenue; Mrs. Rosa Guileano, 75, of 7922 Frankstown avenue, and her grandson, Albert Guileano, 6, same address. All will recover, police were informed.

BOUGHT AT CONFECTIONERY

Police Lieut. David Fitzsimmons, of Frankstown Avenue station, attributed the poisoning to the cakes after he learned that Mrs. Guileano, and her grandson did not attend the wedding, but became ill after partaking of the cakes yesterday on a visit to the Capozzoli home. He submitted samples to the city chemist for analysis.

Carl Capozzoli, a son, said the mixed cakes had been purchased at a confectionery in the Larimer avenue district.

Coke Pay Of 35,000 Is Cut

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 30.—Notices of an 11 per cent average wage reduction for virtually all classes of employes except pit coal diggers was posted today by the H. C. Frick Coke Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation.

The cut affects approximately 35,000 men, mostly in Fayette and Westmoreland counties, and becomes operative July 11. The company, non-union, has paid approximately the Jacksonville scale.

Under the new schedule machine miners' wages are cut 10 per cent, but the pit digging scale, varying from $1.30 to $2.73 a wagonload, according to conditions, is unchanged. Drivers, cagers, blasters, track layers and timbermen will receive $6 for an eight-hour day; assistant timbermen and track layers, $5.25; outside day laborers, $3.60; mine laborers, $5.05; leveling coke ovens, 26 cents each; drawing ovens, 19 cents.

COURT ORDERS CRANDALL TO CALL OFF DANCE TONIGHT

NEW YORK, June 30.—Police failed but the Supreme Court may succeed in stopping the nine couples still sleep-walking in Milton D. Crandall's Madison Square Garden marathon dance, now in its twentieth day. Supreme Court Justice Valente today issued an order which called for cessation of the dance at midnight in his final ruling on an injunction granted Crandall to prevent city health authorities from stopping his dance.

Dr. Louis I. Harris, city health commissioner, had ordered the dance stopped at two o'clock this morning, but Crandall's injunction, obtained from Justice Aaron J. Levy, restrained city police from interfering.

Dr. Harris arrived at the sudden decision to call a halt to the dance derby after receiving information that the condition of Frank McQuinn, who yesterday lay at death's door in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was a direct result of over-exertion from 275 hours of participation in the marathon.

Bedlam broke loose shortly before 2 o'clock when a squad of police prepared to stop the marathon. Some of the 10,000 spectators who jammed the Garden cheered, others booed.

Most of the dancers, although barely able to move, insisted that the dance go on. They had been plodding away for 460 hours, and did not intend to be deprived of a chance at the first prize of $5,000, the pot of gold at the end of the terpsichorean rainbow.

The staggering shufflers were determined to win all or nothing. They protested strenuously when Crandall, pressed by Dr. Harris to stop the marathon, agreed earlier to make an even division of the $5,000 among the contestants. Under this arrangement, each would have received $277.78, or 60 cents an hour. For their growing pains.

As a stimulus to the exhausted entrants, Crandall later announced that the second and third place winners would receive prizes of $2,000 and $1,000, respectively, and that a prize would be given to each couple now remaining in the contest.

When Crandall announced that

DANIELS ASSAILS SMITH LETTER AS DISCORDANT

SEES JOLT TO PARTY PEACE

RALEIGH, N. C., June 30.—(AP.)—Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy in the Woodrow Wilson cabinet, in a dispatch to the Raleigh News and Observer last night characterized the telegram of Gov. Smith, of New York, accepting the Democratic presidential nomination as "unnecessary and ill timed."

"As good feeling and unity prevailed, "the statement said, "the apple of discord was thrown into the peaceful convention by the unwise letter from Gov. Smith. Time was needed for healing wounds. Instead before disappointment of those who doubted the wisdom of his nomination could be lessened the Smith letter irritated the situation.

"As it called for no action, it was not like the celebrated Parker letter to the St. Louis convention to which some have compared it. It was not the letter that disastrously defeated Parker, and the Smith letter will no doubt not defeat Smith. It seems to make harder the unity so much talked about in the convention last night."

Mr. Daniels was a member of the platform committee of the Houston convention and one of those who insisted strenuously on a dry plank.

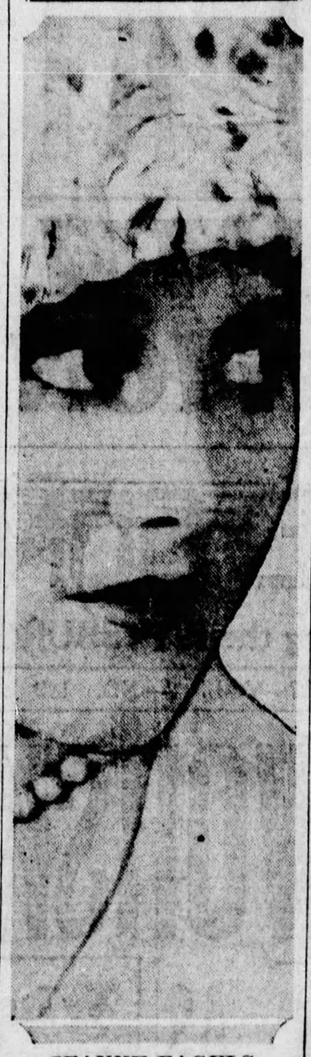
ANNIVERSARY OF B. & O. FIRST RUN CELEBRATED

STRASBURG, O., June 30.—The anniversary of the maiden trip of "Old Atlantic," the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's first locomotive, made June 28, 1832, is being celebrated here in conjunction with Strasburg's centennial. A total of 1,058 passengers have ridden in the ancient coach drawn by the engine here.

World's End



JEANNE EAGELS

The world, perhaps, has ended for Jeanne Eagels, stage star, for she has entered suit for divorce from Edward Harris Coy—Ted Coy, Yale football star—charging cruelty. When they married three years ago it was a "love match that will last forever."

JEANNE EAGELS ASKS DIVORCE, TED CRUEL

Rabies Kill Dog Bite Victim

Rabies resulting from the bite of a stray dog that he had petted six weeks ago, caused the death of William P. Phillips, 23, of McKees Rocks, R. D. No. 1, in the Presbyterian Hospital at 3 o'clock this morning, less than three hours after his admission. He paid no attention to the wound until yesterday, when his arm swelled.

Dorothy Greenwood, 4, of 200 Edith street, is receiving hospital treatment for a dog bite said to have been inflicted by an animal later found dead by Mt. Washington police. The head is being examined for evidence of rabies. Dorothy Fuller, 5, of 3 Angle street, also was bitten by a dog while playing near her home.

Werdner von Muehlenpark, champion police dog, owned by Charles Roadman, 79 North Harrison avenue, Bellevue, died in convulsions yesterday shortly after being let out into the yard for exercise. Dr. S. E. Young, veterinarian, said the dog was poisoned. The Bellevue police are investigating. Werdner von Muehlenpark had taken 18 ribbons at dog shows and had been adjudged champion twice during the past month. It had been entered in the Sewickley dog show opening today. Werdner was a first cousin of Strongheart, famous movie dog.

WIFE ILL

SAYS YALE STAR HIT HER

CHICAGO, June 30.—(AP.)—Jeanne Eagels upon whom "Rain" poured stage success, sought shelter from domestic storms in divorce court today.

Cruelty was the charge made against Edward Harris (Ted) Coy, the one time Yale football flash to whom she was married in August, 1925. Once, she says in her petition, he struck her with his fists. On another occassion he shook her.

It was a busy day for Miss Eagels, for following the morning appearance in court she had to hurry back to Milwaukee where she is appearing in vaudeville. Her attorney obtained Judge Sabath's consent today by explaining that the actress' contracts carry her to the West Coast following the Milwaukee engagement.

Judge Sabath made it a point to satisfy himself of Miss Eagels' legal right to seek a divorce in this state.

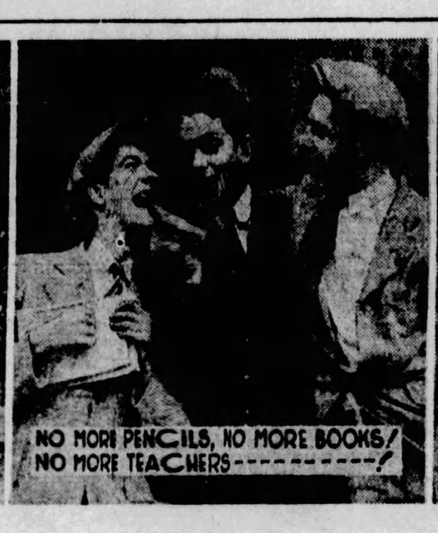
"There has been some criticism, possibly just criticism, that actresses come to Chicago seeking divorces," he said when Miss Eagels' counsel asked that an immediate decree be granted.

"I don't want to encourage Chicago as a Reno. I want to be sure that the complainant has the legal requirements entitling her to a decree in Illinois."

SCHOOL IS OUT! -:- Vacation Days Are Here! -:- FAR OFF SEPTEMBER!

THE END

School is out—out until September! These youngsters give vent to their thoughts.



LYRICAL

And these boys Francis Halilton, Gilbert Williams and Frank Kubiak, become for the time being lyrical——lyrical as you were lyrical years ago!

DANGER

There is no further danger in doing this now, think Esther Shear, Rose Abramovitz and Ruth Abramovitz. They are, you would never believe, Peabody High School students. But summer is here, hooray!

EVERYBODY HAPPY

Everybody is happy, it seems, over this situation, which became practically general throughout the city and surrounding boroughs with the end of this week.

DREAMS

There are today dreams of pleasure in the minds of Pittsburgh's young—dreams, you know, of mud pies and baby dolls and coaster wagons and bare feet. These youngsters have a dream each and happier they will be when they are realized.

2 DIE IN COLORADO TORNADO

GREELEY, Col., June 30.—(AP.)—One woman was killed, another died of heart disease apparently as a result of fright, and 20 or more persons were injured when a tornado struck a thickly settled farming district south of Johnstown, Col., 20 miles southeast of here yesterday.

The small homes of a number of families of Mexican beet workers were destroyed and authorities were investigating persistent reports that several Mexican children were missing.

Six members of a family of Mexican beet workers were cut and bruised when the storm struck the small house in which they had taken refuge.

Buildings and livestock valued at over $100,000 were destroyed it was estimated.

Mrs. McLaughlin's death occurred when a large tree limb penetrated the closet in which she and three other members of her family had fled for safety. The other three occupants of the closet were unjured.

YOUNGSTOWN PRIEST GOING TO CLEVELAND

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 30.—The Rev. M. F. Griffin, pastor of St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church and the most widely known priest in the city, will be transferred shortly to St. Philomene Parish, Cleveland, it was announced yesterday. The Rev. Griffin is head of St. Elizabeth Hospital and has been active in state hospital work. His successor here is the Rev. John F. Maloney, for 16 years pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Hubbard, Trumbull county.

FORTY PADLOCK ORDERS WAIT

Liquor padlock decrees against about 40 saloons and stores were presented for signature of the Federal Court by Assistant United States District Attorney Joseph A. Richardson, but they were held over because of absence from the city of Judge F. P. Schoonmaker. He is expected to return in a few days when the enjoining orders padlocking each place for one year will be signed.

be made by the people themselves through their elected legislative representatives, I feel it to be the duty of the chosen leader of the people to point the way which, in his opinion, leads to a sane, sensible solution of a condition which I am convinced is entirely unsatisfactory to the great mass of our people."

WHAT THEY PREDICT

Democrats from the North, South, the East and the West have once more joined hands and the coming battle bids fair to be one of the hardest fought in history.

The strategy of the campaign will be marked in detail when the board of strategy meets Gov. Smith in New York about July 10.

The Democrats intend to concentrate their efforts on New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Delaware, the border states of Kentucky, Tennessee and Illinois.

George Brennan, Democratic boss of Illinois, declared that Smith will carry that normally Republican state.

Fred W. Johnson, a young attorney of Rock Springs, Wyo., chairman of the Smith Western states committee, which placed the natural McAdoo states in the Smith column, predicted that Smith will carry Wyoming, Montana, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada.

Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, declared that his state, Connecticut and Rhode Island can be carried for Smith.

KIDNAPED AMERICAN REPORTED ESCAPED

MEXICO CITY, June 30.—(AP.)—A report that W. E. Mitchell, one of two Americans kidnaped by bandits June 26, has escaped, has reached El Universal Grafico. Nothing to bear out this newspaper report has been received by the United States embassy. Mitchell, with John F. Hooper, had been held for $1,500 ransom. The two men were taken near Guadalajara.

BALLOON RACERS READY

DETROIT, June 30. — (AP.) — Premier balloonists of seven nations lined up today for the start of the Gordon Bennett international race.

The lighter-than-air craft classic which has drawn 12 entries this year was to get under way at the Ford Airport at 4 p. m., shortly after the start of the national airplane tour. Three of the balloons, all of which are of 80,000 cubic feet gas capacity, represent the United States, three Germany and two France. Denmark, Switzerland, Argentina and Belgium have one entry each.

Ferdinand Eimmermacher, pilot of the German balloon "Munster," drew No. 1 position for the start. A. C. Palmer, pilot of the balloon "American Business Club" of Akron, O., will be the second off. The remaining 10 bags were to start at five-minute intervals in the order named:

Detroit (United States), Lafayette (France), Barmen (Germany), Brandenberg (Germany), Denmark (Denmark), Helvita (Switzerland), United States Army (United States), Argentina (Argentina), Wall-Onia (Belgium), Blanchard (France).

The balloon traveling the greatest distance from Detroit in any direction will be awarded the race.

OIL FLOODS STREETS WHEN PIPE LINE BREAKS

MARATHON ORDERED STOPPED

Eddie Leonard, of Pittsburgh, had decided to quit, several of the contestant's friends threw wads of paper and bottles at him. Leonard himself, emerging from his tent, declared that the promoter was misinformed and that he would stick to the end.

The other 17 contestants remaining in the marathon are Marianne Jasque, of Pittsburgh, Leonard's partner; Tommy Nolan and Anna King, of Pittsburgh; Gunner Neilson and Hannah Karpmann, of New York; Bill Busch and Mary Promitis, of Pittsburgh; James Priore and Florence Carlough, of Passaic; Dominick Laperte and Charlotte Kush, of Johnstown, Pa.; Alfred Ippalite and Dorothy Brennan, of New York; James Scott and Olga Christensen, of New York, and Dave Auerbach and Vera Campbell, of New York.

MEDICS TO TEST DANCERS

When the nine couples in the Duquesne Garden Marathon dance complete 400 hours of non stop hoofing at 1 o'clock this afternoon they will pass before a medical examining board to determine what effect the grind has had upon them.

The dancers completed 399 hours at noon today, before going to the training quarters, where showers have been installed for their convenience.

A checkup of presents and money received by the dancers since the hoofing started shows 262 presents, including shoes, gowns, dresses, stockings, jewelry, fruit and cakes. Money from friends and the management totaled $2,485.

Early today Teenie Neiman and Tony Phillips, the Amerita Club entry, staged a fox trot for five minutes, and later the other couples stepped on the gas for a few minutes. They will spend their third Sunday afloat, using the Japanese Garden, pleasure boat.

The retirement of Patsy Corratto and Jenny Angelo, Braddock, cut the Stahl Garden bunioneers in Homestead to 20 couples. They quit at 6 o'clock this morning. At noon the remaining contestants had 88 hours to their credit.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 30.—Fifteen hoofers continued their corn derby here today, having completed 299 hours at noon. Whether the dance will be continued on a boat or in a private home here, over Sunday, has not yet been decided.

ICE PERILS NOBILE CREW

Smith Plans Constructive Drive

WILL SHUN LENGTHY ATTACKS ON G.O.P.

International News Service.

ALBANY, June 30.—The voters of the United States will be treated to a typical Al Smith campaign this year, when the Governor of New York takes the stump as the standard bearer of the Democratic party in the contest for the presidency. As far as Gov. Smith is concerned it will be the sort of constructive campaign the people of New York have become familiar with in the last decade during which he was a candidate for the governorship five times and was defeated only once.

"I propose to talk to the American people the way I've talked to the people of my own state," the Governor said last night, as he sat in the quiet of the executtive mansion.

The nominee did not elaborate upon his campaign plans, but those who have followed his election battles in this state predict he will wage a "constructtive campaign," following closely his general theory of campaigning.

PLANS TO TELL AIMS

His plan of battle in the coming campaign is outlined by his associates as follows: He does not intend to spend much time in attacking the errors of the Republicans as seen through Democratic spectacles. He does not believe in constantly reminding the voters of evils of the past. Instead he proposes to tell the definite thing he wants to do. In that kind of a campaign, he claims, he has been always successful.

"Sell your goods by promoting your goods themselves, without telling how rotten the other fellows' goods are," might be used as summing up the description by the Governor's friends of his attitude on the subject. So governmental preservation and development of waterpower, protection of women and children in industries, orderly modification of the Volstead act, pre-election filing of campaign receipts and expenditures, may be expected to be prominent campaign arguments, rather than diatribes against Teapot Dome and other Republican 'scandals.'"

If he follows his New York campaign style, as announced last night, there will be no "canned speeches." He will use no material which is simply handed out to him; he will talk of nothing he does not thoroughly understand.

TO MEET COMMITTEEMEN

The Governor has made no arrangements concerning speech making and public appearances. He expects to see the Democratic national committeemen in New York City next week, and at that time some of the preliminary plans may be developed.

The Governor does not intend to resign from his present office. Several weeks ago he spiked a rumor that he would resign. If he serves out his entire term as Governor up to midnight of next December 31 he will be eligible for retirement with an annual pension amounting to some $6,560.

The Governor is by no means a rich man, and he has made it plain that he needs this reward for his years of public service. If he were to resign, which would be leaving the state service through an act of his own, the pension would be unavailable.

Act As Friends, Not Democrats, Says Rogers

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30.—She is all over and don't let anybody kid you that the Democrats didn't nominate their best possible ticket and the same applies to the Republicans, so it will be a pleasure to just sit back and watch four fine men run. Joe Robinson will make a great presiding officer after the Senate. I got a wife out of that state and they do know how to tell somebody else when to hush and sit down.

WILL ROGERS

The whole thing ended so harmonious that they acted more like friends than Democrats. If they could just hold the election now before they have time to go home and think up something to call each other.

Houston and Kansas City both did fine jobs.

Yours drowsily,

VETERANS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Veterans of the 102nd Infantry, the old 13th Infantry, are observing the 63d anniversary of the disbandment of their ranks after the Civil War. Here are Andrew Moos, Thomas Reynolds J. S. Tythian, David Buchanan, and John Bowman, attending the reunion at Memorial Hall. The children are grandchildren of their late Comrade Davis and are Anna Eidemiller, Nelda Fennell, Wilmer Eidemiller, Elizabeth Eidemiller, and Gale Fennell.

"GOOD BRICKS" FOR CITY

MAYVIEW WORK

City Councilman John Herron—he who started as a brick layer and still holds his union card—is positive that there are 'good bricks" going into the city's construction work at Mayview, where city officials inspected progress. Here, he shows Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director, Department of Public Welfare, the best of the bricks.

KILLED ON ROLLER COASTER

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 30.—Becoming overbalanced while riding a roller coaster car at the Maple View Amusement Park near here, Samuel H. Malone, 22, of Highland avenue, Burgettstown, was thrown to the track of the device and killed instantly, last midnight.

His body was dragged along the track by the tow chain for 30 feet before it became loosened and fell 70 feet to the ground.

The park has been opened only a few weeks. Malone, a son of Mrs. Annie Malone, of Burgettstown, had gone to the park with a party of friends.

NORTH SIDE ROBBER GETS WATCH, CASH

A woman's watch valued at $50 and $75 in cash were stolen from the home of Lewis Adams, of 716 Madison avenue, North Side, during the night. The thief forced a cellar door and also forced a door leading up into the house.

Herbert Hoover, Al Smith, In Glen Rock

YORK, Pa., June 30.—(AP.)—The town of Glen Rock, in York county, with less than 1,300 population, has the unique distincitons of having two citizens named Al Smith and Herbert Hoover.

The Glen Rock Hoover is a high school teacher and commander of the American Legion post, while "Al" Smith is a retired farmer and drives an ice route in the summer time.

ICE DRIFT CARRIES NOBILE CREW

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 30.—(AP.)—Ice conditions about the encampment of the survivors of the Italia were getting worse today and adding to their peril. Fog prevented airmen from approaching them, but hopes were held that better conditions would soon prevail, as the weather was improving.

The wind and currents drove the marooned men nine miles to the east and today they were nearly nine miles north of Grand Island and east of Cape Leigh Smith.

A small Swedish flying boat set out from Hinolpen Strait in an attempt to reach the castaways but was driven back by the fog. The ice breaker Braganza with two Norwegian fliers aboard was still blocked by ice at North Cape.

In the meantime intensive search was continuing by dog teams for three members of the Nobile party who started toward the region along various routes which the trio might have taken.

AMUNDSEN SEARCH SHIFTS

International News Service.

LONDON, June 30.—The search for Capt. Roald Amundsen, noted Arctic explorer, missing for almost two weeks, today shifted to the region between Bear Island and Spitzbergen.

A report received at Oslo, Norway, from Ibestad, Norway, stated that several fishermen returning from an expedition to Bear Island, declared they saw the French seaplane Latham about 60 miles northeast of the island on the night of June 18.

Bear Island is about half way between Tromsoe, Norway, and the southern coast of Spitzbergen. Amundsen, Maj. Rene Guilbaud, Lieut. Dietrichsen and two others left Tromsoe in the Latham on the morning of the eighteenth to search for Gen. Nobile and his crew.

The fishermen said the plane was flying steadily and the motors appeared to be functioning properly. They said it was headed straight for the southern coast of Spitzbergen. Their story is significant because of the fact that the Latham may have come down on the icy waters between Bear Island and Spitzbergen and not in the regions further north, which are now being scoured by planes.

'OTHER MAN' IN DIVORCE SUITS

Two wives were charged with misconduct in divorce actions filed in Common Pleas Court yesterday.

William B. Snyder, 198 Fair Haven Road, Overbrook, made the charge against his wife, Mrs. Anna M. Snyder, also of Overbrook, and named W. G. Sligel. John J. O'Connell, 5100 Liberty avenue made a similar charge against Mrs. Mary O'Connell, 5545 Penn avenue, but did not name a co-respondent.

Mrs. Elsoe M. Hilker, 808 Norland avenue East Carnegie, sued Frank C. Hilker, Los Angeles, Cal., charging desertion. The same charge was made by Mrs. Edith G. Buchanan, 421 North Highland avenue, against Leslie D. Buchanan, Winnipeg, Canada.

Charges of cruelty were made in suits filed by the following: Mrs. Helen Horwath, 1139 Troy Hill Road against Steve Horwath, 1144 Providence street; Gustav Schubert, 5163 Braun way, against Mrs. Ruth Schubert, Lincoln road, Penn township, and Mrs. Naida E. Holland, 245 Thirty-eighth street against Leo M. Holland, Altoona.

RIVERS ON RAMPAGE IN W. VA.

LOGAN, W. Va., June 30.—(AP.)—A heavy rainfall which forced streams in Southern West Virginia out of their banks took a toll of one life and caused considerable property damage in Logan county yesterday.

At Aracoma Joe Nathan Irving, 6, Negro, was drowned and his grandmother, Mary Woods, suffered a broken leg when their home was undermined by the waters of Buffalo Creek.

One building of the Amherst Coal Company of Buffalo Creek and two on Mud Fork were washed away by the waters. Railroad property was reported to have been damaged seriously in Logan county. Autobile traffic was halted by washouts and high water on the Logan-Charleston highway.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 30.—(AP.)—City streets were flooded and street car service was interrupted in the southern part of Huntington when Four Pole Creek, swelled by a heavy rain, overflowed its banks. Other creeks in this vicinity are out of their banks.

A rainfall of 2.25 inches in the Huntington district was reported by the United States engineer's office here.

The Ohio River reached a stage of 29 feet last night and a stage of 50 feet, only a little below flood level, was predicted.

WASHINGTON (PA.) BONDS SOLD IN PHILADELPHIA

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 30.—The Council of this city at an adjourned meeting yesterday afternoon ordered the sale of $110,000 worth of bonds to the A. B. Leach and Company of Philadelphia, on its bid of $102.60 plus accrued interest. The total premium being $2,860. The money will be used for street paving.

Pittsburgh AS OTHERS SEE US

"I should unreservedly approve of Pittsburgh if I could see it in the daytime."

—GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON.

GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON, author, born in Tippecanoe county, Ind., July 26, 1866; educated at Perdue University. Began career as a newspaper reporter in Lafayette, Ind., in 1889, and worked for several journals. His story, "Graustark," published in 1901, gained instant popularity, and his subsequent books have held the reading public. Lives in New York City.

My only acquaintance with Pittsburgh is more or less vicarious. It is gleaned from passage through the city when sound asleep in a Pullman coach. I am convinced that it is my misfortune and that I should unreservedly approve of Pittsburgh if I could see it in the daytime—because then I should be awake. . . .

It seems to me that there is good reason why a manufacturing community should be interested in art in all its phases as well as in a more substantial (if not quite so enduring) devotion to steel, coal, cog-wheels and daybooks. The trouble is that the Pittsburghs, the New Yorks and the Chicagos are much more speedily and easily created than the slow-moving, cautious thing called art.

D. W. Griffith Slated to Direct William Boyd and Lupe Velez in Film Play Titled 'The Love Song'

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 30.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, and not Sam Taylor, will direct William Boyd and Lupe Velez in United Artists' photodrama, "The Love Song." Taylor was originally assigned to the production, but he has an agreement with Mary Pickford, which gives her first call on his services. So now that Mary is back with bobbed locks and some great ideas for a picture which gives her an entirely different type to portray, all hands deemed it best for Sam to concentrate on Mary's film. So it happens that D. W. will quit beating "Drums of Love" to sing "The Love Song" through his megaphone.

After five years away from the footlights and under the Klieigs, Rod La Rocque plans to leave here next month for rehearsals in a Broadway play. Rod, himself, is authority for the statement, although he is not willing to tell us any of the details. Rod's last De Mille film, "Captain Swagger," is almost completed. And it won't be long now before Vilma finishes up in "The Rescue." Then the newlyweds will take as long a vacation as Sam Goldwyn and the fates permit.

It only took Helene Costello six months to decide that she didn't care for her part as the wife of John Y. Regan, who, at last accounts, was busy playing tennis down on Long Island. Helene told the judge that Johnny said mean things to her movie guests, and, being the perfect hostess, Helene finally decided that there's a limit to almost everything. The judge agreed, so now Helene is free to try again.

When Earle Williams died his friends were a bit surprised his estate was estimated at only $50,000. For Earle had the reputation of having many canny investments. Thus there is no surprise that the appraisement of the estate has been raised to almost a quarter-million dollars.

When Norma Talmadge and party, which includes Gilbert Roland, her leading man in several pictures, returns from Honolulu, it is understood that Norma will depart almost immediately for Europe. According to report there is no definite plan as to the next step in her long and brilliant screen career.

"The Blood Ship" has sailed into the court records. The Thomas H. Ince Corporation insisted that its plot was purloined from a picture called "Behind the Door," which Hobart Bosworth made many years ago. The Ince outfit is suing both Bosworth and Columbia pictures for profits derived from "The Blood Ship." This, you remember, was a Columbia photodrama, starring Bosworth, and rated among the best films of its year.

How'd you like to make a picture in the jungles of Africa—and catch the lions' roars, the gibber of gorillas, even the laughs of hyenas for the "Speakies?" That is the assignment handed out by Metro to W. S. Van Dyke, who will film "Trader Horn." The locale selected is in the French Congo, where there is an almost impenetrable wilderness. But Van Dyke, the adventurer, relishes his task and looks forward to more fun than he had while grinding out "White Shadows of the South Seas."

In preparing to film "The Green Hat," director Clarence Brown searched Hollywood for some one thoroughly familiar with Merrie England, Mayfair and the rest, to act as technical adviser on the picture. Britons have been known to wail long and loudly at Yankee movies doing such things as depicting hunting secenes in the spring, and a terrific howl was raised when H. B. Warner wore B. V. Ds. in "Sorrell and Son." For all England wears the long kind. But anyhow, quite by accident, Brown met Cedric Belfrage, Cambridge man, who is viewing Hollywood through British eyes for fan magazines there. Cedric is as British as the Thames, and knows his England like nobody's business. So he will have the technical supervision of the film, and for once King George's subjects will be done right by.

Jimmy Gleason has left the prize-ring, the stage and minstrel shows behind to wander into new fields in preparing a story in which his pal, Robert Armstrong, will star on the screen. Its name is "Totem," and it's full of Indians as a buffalo nickel. The scene is laid in Alaska, but there's nary an Esquimo in sight. Gleason has topped off "Is Zat So," and "The Shannons of Broadway," with "Bones," which Al Jolson will play this fall. Armstrong will make "Totem" after he finishes "Ned McCobb's Daughter," in which he is Anna Q. Nilsson's hero. At present Bob is sporting a mustache grown specially for his part in Lina Basquette's picture, "Show Folks."

The Fox lot seems sort of minus these days with June Collyer and Mary Duncan both absent on location for their pictures. June's in 'Frisco; Mary 'way up in Vancouver. June by the way, has been definitely cast for "Chasing Through Europe," which will give her a vacation on the other side.

Thomas Meighan is all set to run back to Great Neck and golf. "The Mating Call" having been completed in jig time by Director Jimmy Cruze. Jacqueline Gadsden will be Lon Chaney's wife in "West of Zanzibar," while both Owen Lee and "Spec" O'Donnell, now a tall youth but freckled as ever, have both been cast in "Show Girl."

Marguerite Celova, formerly of vaudeville, tries to make Billy Dooley glad she joined the movies.

PLAYS, MOVIES ANNOUNCED

In "The Nervous Wreck," in the Nixon next week, Harry Banister will play the part of Henry Williams, originally played in New York by Taylor Holmes. Katherine Wilson will have the roll Genevieve Tobiin played opposite Holmes.

One of the largest casts that has been employed in any production of the George Sharp Players in the Pitt will appear in "Cradle Snatchers" next week. There are 10 principal parts, three middle-aged men, their three somewhat younger wives, three "cake eaters" and the sweetheart of one of the boys.

"A Thief in the Dark," mystery circus drama, will be shown in the Davis next week as the screen feature. The stage acts include "Wagner Brothers' Side Show."

The John Murray Anderson stage revue scheduled for the Penn next week is titled "Xylophonia." It features 14 of these instruments going full blast and in unison. Twelve of them are played by the Foster girls. On the screen will be William Haines in "Telling the World."

Doris Kenyon plays the feminine lead opposite Milton Sills in "The Hawk's Nest," coming to the Stanley screen next week. There also is to be a varied stage presentation.

The Harris vaudeville next week will include Bill Lorraine and Jack Neal, comedians. On the screen will be "The Little Yellow House" and Ralph Lewis in "Crooks Can't Win."

Among the vaudeville attractions in the Sheridan Square Theater next week will be Peter the Great, trained ape. The two screen features will be Rudolph Schildkraut in "A Ship Comes In" and George Meeker and Majorie Beebe in "A Thief in the Dark."

PARSON'S GIN TOTER; ARRESTED; BAILED OUT

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 30.—His protestations that he was toting the "parson's gin" did not gain leniency for James E. Wicks, 52, Negro, of this city, who was caught carrying a gallon jug of the alcoholic beverage. "This is just some gin for the parson," Wicks said when caught. He furnished $500 bail.

AWNING HITS WOMAN; SUES FOR $25,000

Because her skull was fractured by a falling awning while she was walking in Sixth street, Mrs. Ida Kelly filed suit in Common Pleas Court yesterday against the United Cigar Stores Company for $25,000 damages. She says two men, putting up the awning at 111 Sixth street, allowed it to fall.

KENNYWOOD OFFERS VARIETY FEATURES

The Ancient Order of Hibernians of Allegheny county are holding their reunion and celebrating their sixty-ninth anniversary in Kennywood Park today.

Tomorrow marks the last day of Mme. Bedini's horses and Sir Victor's European dog and pony circus at Kennywood. Billie Ritchey's water circus comes to the swimming pool Monday. Lieut. T. J. Vastine and his Westinghouse Band will play four concerts tomorrow, and Izzy Cervonne and his band will be at the park July 4. Danny Nirella's Kennywoodians will play for the dancing in the pavilion.

Amelia Earheart a Feature in News Reels

The first motion pictures of the arrival in Europe of the American girl, Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly over the Atlantic Ocean, are being shown at leading theaters throughout the country by M-G-M News and International Newsreel. A thrilling race to get the pictures first to the screens of American theaters was won by M-G-M News and International Newsreel.

Negatives, as well as prints, of the epochal subject arrived from Europe on the Ile de France. Speed boats, seaplanes and tugs met the steamship at quarantine, where the pictures were taken off. M-G-M News and International Newsreel had engaged a Gar Wood runabout speedboat, which made a remarkable trip from quarantine to the foot of Twelfth street, in the North River, New York, with the motion and still pictures. Prints were sent by airplane throughout the country.

The pictures show the landing of Miss Earhart, her pilot, Wilmer Stultz, and her mechanic, Lou Gordon, at Burry Port, Wales; their reception at Southampton where the lady mayor, Mrs. L. M. Walsh, congratulated the dauntless girl flier, and the remarkable demonstration accorded the intrepid Americans in London.

ALL CREEDS ON CHURCH BILL

In celebration of the nation's anniversary of the birth of freedom—July 4—"An All-Nations' Good Will Service," believed unique in Pittsburgh religious history, will be held in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, Sunday night.

Ministers and laymen of all creeds and nationalities have been invited by the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor of Second Church, to participate in a great patriotic and religious "peace and good will" demonstration, based on the Biblical promise that "My house shall be a house of prayer for all people."

Among the speakers will be Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Pittsburgh Department of Welfare, representing the Hebrew race; Peter Demos, Greeks; Attorney Frank Canuti, Italians; Dr. Samuel Gomory, Hungarians; Mrs. Agnes Gieslewics, Polish; Kosto Unkavich, Jugoslavia; the Rev. Stephen Malakiak, Ukranians; the Rev. Dr. James R. Cox, pastor Old St. Patrick's Catholic, the Irish; the Rev. Dr. B. F. Glasgow, Bidwell Street Presbyterian, Negroes; the Rev. M. F. Bierbaum, Germans, and Dr. Shelton, American and English.

Maintaining the national characteristics and adding colorful solemnity to the meeting, will be groups of foreign-born persons in the costumes of their homelands.

At the morning service in Second Church, Dr. Shelton will preach from the text, "Call No Man Common," introducing the theme that is to dominate the night service.

JAR OF COINS DUG UP; ALL ARE COUNTERFEIT

ROCHESTER, Pa., June 30.—Visions of a fortune loomed when workmen excavating for a sewer at the old Dagen homestead, West Madison street, unearthed a large jar which contained many coins, apparently silver, which were dated 1853 and 1854. The coins, all quarters and half-dollars, were American. However, when examined by officers of the Rochester Trust Company it was found instead of being silver the money was not even good pewter. How the counterfeit coins came to be buried where they were found is a complete mystery. The property was taken over by the Dagen family in 1858.

CAR CO. SUED IN TWO DEATHS

Fifteen thousand dollars for a husband and $10,000 for a wife was the value placed on human lives in two suits filed in Common Pleas Court yesterday, against thee Pittsburgh Railways Company.

Mrs. Emma Weiss, whose husband, Adolph Weiss was killed by a street car while crossing Hamilton avenue at Tenner way November 17 sued for $15,000 damages.

August Reitzel, whose wife Sarah, 43, was killed at Penn avenue and Twenty-eighth street, sued for $10,000.

SERMON TOPICS INSPIRED BY HOLIDAY

The political conventions and Independence Day apparently have inspired many of the sermons to be heard from Pittsburgh pulpits tomorrow.

Those who attend Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church in the morning will hear "Prohibition," as presented by the Rev. W. S. Trosh. The Rev. C. E. Kolb of the First Brethren Church will speak on "Religion and Patriotism" at the 11 o'clock service. In the East End Christian Church, "The Stars and Our Flag" will be the subject of the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers.

UNION SERVICES

Many of the churches will join in union services in the evening. These services include those at Carnegie Music Hall, West Park and on the Y. M. C. A. lawn in Bellevue.

Attendants at Christ Methodist Episcopal Church will hear the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Albert Edward Day, in his farewell summer sermon. He leaves Monday for a two-months' vacation in New England. Visiting preachers will fill his pulpit.

The Americanism of Lincoln, Garfield and Hayes will be contrasted by the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan in the evening at Emory Methodist Episcopal Church. And in the nearby Point Breeze Presbyterian Church a visitor, the Rev. Dr. Edwin C. Cort, in charge of the McCormick Hospital at Chieng Mai, Siam, will tell of his experiences.

The Rev. Dr. O. Stewart Michael of Ascension Memorial Church of New York City, will preach his first sermon in St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church tomorrow morning.

ORANGEMEN SERVICE

Members of the International Orange Association and of the Ulster Society of Pittsburgh will attend services at Old First Methodist Protestant Church, which is celebrating its hundredth anniversary.

At the morning services of the B'nai Israel congregation, Dr. Ben Zion Mosensohn, director of Jaffa Gymnasium, Palestine, and Zion leader, will speak.

Baby Day services at Old St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church will find the Rev. James R. Cox, the pastor, blessing the infants of his congregation.

Dr. A. R. Robinson, of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Hutchison, of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, will exchange pulpits for morning services, when Dr. Hutchison will speak on "Vacation Responsibilities."

SYNAGOGUE DEDICATION

Postponed from last Sunday because of rain, the dedication of the Poale Zedeck Synagogue, Squirrel Hill, will be carried out tomorrow, Rabbi S. B. Friedman announces. Tuesday, in Hotel Schenley, there will be a banquet.

Patriotic and religious services will be combined at the downtown mission of Volunteers of America, where Major Richard H. Ives will speak afternoon and night. At Salvation Army headquarters, Col. Edward J. Parker, for 43 years an Army worker, will speak at morning and night services.

CLERGY OPPOSE 'THE CAPTIVE'

The Social Service Commission of the Pittsburgh Council of Churches will hold a special meeting in the council's offices in the Law and Finance Building at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon to formulate a protest against the presentation of "The Captive" here. The play, which has for its theme a morbid situation, is billed for the Gayety Theater the week of July 2. The Rev. Dr. Ralph B. Urmy, pastor of the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church, is chairman of the Social Service Commission.

"The subject of 'The Captive' is a fit matter for study in the psychopathic laboratory," said the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Zahniser, executive secretary of the Council of Churches, "but it is unfit for popular presentation on the stage, and we shall protest against its being produced in Pittsburgh. Director Clark, of the Department of Public Safety, will be invited to read the play, and if he cannot obtain a copy we will supply him with one."

B. Iden Payne, former director of the School of Drama at Carnegie Institute of Technology: "To many people the subject of which 'The Captive' treats, as abnormality is distasteful, and so they find the play offensive. Yet it is a very fine play, very delicately written, and when acted in the skillful way in which it was handled at the Empire Theater in New York is not objectionable. It received finished treatment there; the performance was very high-class indeed.

"The play ran for a long time in New York before the police interfered. Few of the thousands that saw it regarded it as objectionable. But a general feeling against the treatment of certain themes on the stage developed, and 'The Captive' was singled out for suppression. It ran for a long time in Chicago under its French name, 'La Prisonniere.'

"I believe that if there is a general feeling on the part of the public that a play should not be given it should be suppressed. But there is no such feeling in respect to 'The Captive.'

"I do not believe in censorship. The only real censorship should be public opinion, and it has no chance to operate if there is exterior censorship; for people will think, if censors pass on a play before it is produced, that it must be all right and so they will not weigh its merits as they should.

"Every play should have opportunity to let public opinion pass on it."

THE JULY SALE OF LINENS
OPENS THE NEW LINEN DEPARTMENT
FOURTH FLOOR, EAST

Another step in the store improvement plan—the opening of a great new linen department, on the fourth floor, adjacent to the new bedding department, bringing allied furnishings for the home conveniently together, and all home furnishings on two and a half vast floors.

With a new location and an enlarged department to introduce and exploit, we have gone about our preparations for this year's July Sale of Linens on a larger scale than usual. It is our hope to make this Sale the means of making the public quickly acquainted with this improved department and its new location. To this end we have made special prices on the fine qualities which have given this store its excellent reputation for Linens, that are certain to compel wide attention. Choose Monday from the complete assortments of the first day of the Sale.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

June Runs True to Form and Furnishes Downpour to Put Damper to Sewickley Dog Show

NICE day for the dog show, isn't it?

Apparently we can't rely on June any more. She has failed us almost every time an outdoor event has been scheduled all during the month. If it hasn't rained, it has been too chilly for comfort—and this last day is including both of these somewhat unpleasant features.

Aside from the weather, though, everything tends toward the success of the show. Nearly 400 dogs are entered, among the local exhibitors being Lewis A. Park, who is showing 17 pointers, setters, greyhounds and wire-haired fox terriers; E. M. Byers, with 12 sealyham and cairn terriers and springer spaniels; Dr. G. E. Van Kirk, who owns pointers and setters; R. F. Maloney, with pointers; A. B. Harlow, Mrs. Charles F. Holdship and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Jones III.

I HEAR that a distinguished visitor will arrive here tomorrow to be the guest of the Ralph W. Harbisons, of Sewickley, and attend Marjorie Harbison's wedding to Walter Brooke Stabler, of Wilmington, Del., on Monday night. He is Sir Reginald Patterson, former British financial advisor to the Egyptian government, and I understand that Mr. Harbison is going to give a "stag" dinner Thursday night in the Allegheny Country Club for him.

Marjorie's uncle, Dr. Erdman Harris, of Cairo, Egypt, is going to perform the ceremony, you know, assisted by the Rev. James A. Kelso and the Rev. Dr. Owen Davies Odell. In addition to Sir Reginald, there will be quite a few guests from other cities. The Caleb Stablers, parents of the bridegroom, will, of course, come on from Wilmington, and other visitors from the same city are Mr. and Mrs. William Winger Laird, Miss Molly and Miss Letty Laird, Alfred Bissell and Hugh Galloway. Then Mr. and Mrs. Laird Stabler, of Nashville, Tenn., will be here, and so will Mrs. R. R. Donnelly, Miss Margaret Donnelly, Reuben H. Donnelly and Thomas Donnelly, of Chicago; Mrs. Burton S. Harris and the Joseph N. Shenstones, of Toronto; Mrs. Frederick M. Harris and the Ruell T. Mounts, of New York; Miss Charlotte Eckhardt, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. William Hunter DeButts, of Upperville, Va.; the Henry F. Popes, Sarah Pope and John Pope, of Cleveland.

VIRGINIA WILLOCK "came out" yesterday at a tea which her father and mother, the Frank S. Willocks, of Academy avenue, Sewickley, gave in the Allegheny Country Club. This is the second debut party in Sewickley this summer, you will remember, Jane Wilson having been introduced last Saturday—and it closes the first of Sewickley's "little seasons."

Virginia shared honors yesterday with her visitor, Josephine Seeler, of Philadelphia, and after the tea was over, the Willocks gave a dinner at the club for their daughter. There were about 65 guests.

I understand the Willocks are going to give a dance next December 26 in the Pittsburgh Club for Virginia. The family, by the way, is leaving within a short time to spend the summer at Dark Harbor, Me.

THE marriage of Miss Frances Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Ray, of Whitney avenue, Wilkinsburg, and Risher A. Dunlevy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harvey Dunlevy, of Linden avenue, will be solemnized tonight in the First Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg by the Rev. Dr. George Taylor, Jr. The bride will wear white satin and lace, embroidered with pearls and brilliants, and her tulle veil will be caught with a lace headdress. The attendants will wear georgette and lace in the pastel shades. Mrs. Ralph Jamison Buterbaugh, of Wilkinsburg, as matron of honor, will wear green and will carry yellow roses, while the maid of honor, Miss Virginia Ray, sister of the bride, will appear in pink. The bridesmaids will be Miss Ann Cooke, in blue; Miss Frances Wright, in yellow, and Miss Lydia Cypher, in orchid. Virginia Carson, of Monongahela, and Judith Reutnik, of Lakewood, O., the flower girls, will wear peach georgette and taffeta trimmed with cream lace. Marlin H. Morgan, of Virginia, will be best man and the ushers will include George Shands, of Washington; Frank Thompson, of Pittsburgh, and John Packer and Ralph J. Buterbaugh, of Wilkinsburg.

Among the guests at the luncheon of 400 covers given in Mrs. Roberts' honor at William Penn Hotel were Miss Gene R. Roberts, Mrs. Anna W. Dashiell, Mrs. Susan Cunningham and Miss Bertha S. Walter.

SUN-TELE PICNIC FOR YOUNG, OLD

All Pittsburgh is awaiting the children's jubilee at National Amusement Park next Tuesday which has been sponsored by The Sun-Telegraph. Tickets have been issued and nearly 50,000 boys and girls are on tip-toe in expectancy of the joyful day they are going to have, where everything will be free.

Grown-up folks as well are interested in the outing and have told The Sun-Telegraph how pleased they are that the picnic has been arranged for the boys and girls who are about to celebrate their first holiday in their summer vacation period.

"Its a great thing to provide a day out of doors for these young people," said Thomas Liggett, who has endeared himself to the children through his patriotic speeches and his work in behalf of the Boy Scouts and other recreational activities. "It is fine that the boys and girls from the city and the country can meet and enjoy the day together. And mark you, the older people will get just as much enjoyment out of the picnic as the children."

"The Sun-Telegraph is to be congratulated for its enterprise in providing a free-picnic for the children of its readers," said Miss Helen Grimes, Allegheny county's only woman member of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

"What I regret is that I am not a boy myself," said William H. Stevenson. "If I were, I am sure I would go to the Sun-Telegraph's jubilee."

However, there will be a big throng of older people there. Parents of the boys and girls, and particularly the mothers, are going in large numbers to look after the little visitors and will themselves enjoy a day in the big park. The gates will be open at 9 a. m., daylight saving time, and the amusement coupons will be good 6 p. m. Between 12 o'clock noon and 1 p. m. the French vanilla bar of Reinhold's "Cream of the Valley" will be served. Free balloons as soon as the crowd comes.

MRS. HARRIET TAYLOR UPTON, for 15 years treasurer of the National Woman's Suffrage Association and a prominent speaker in several successive Republican presidential campaigns, will be one of the speakers at the Business and Professional Women's convention to be held in New Orleans July 14 to 19. Miss Anne Armstrong, personnel director of the Eastman Kodak Company and recognized as one of the leading authorities on business women's problems, is another speaker, and also included are Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Ohio Supreme Court; Dr. Maud Locher and Miss Mary Walker. Dr. Locher is a member of the American College of Physicians, and Miss Walker is associated with Borden & Co., New York. Her subject is to be "Clothes as an Asset to the Business and Professional Woman." She will also speak at the "Merchandising, Buying and Selling" round table.

WITH Mrs. Estelle DeWald as chairman, the Secretaries' Association of Pennsylvania, Order of the Eastern Star, will give a breakfast next Friday at 11 o'clock in the Woman's City Club. About 75 guests are expected.

CARRICK BABY SHOW PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

ONE of the largest "baby days" the Carrick Mothers' Club has has ever held was the one which the civic committee conducted yesterday in the clubhouse. There were 78 entries and the prizes were awarded as follows: One to 6 months, John Quinn and Virginia Smith; 6 to 12, Henry Koehnke and Ruth Breen; 12 to 18, Frank Williams, Jr., and Mary Louise Megaffin; 18 to 24, Glen Colgan and Janet Pugh; 24 to 30, Marilya Joy Cochran; 30 to 36, Thomas Bennett; twins, William and Ethel Jeckey; visitors, Laverne Glasser and Alexander Waddell. The civic committee is composed of Mrs. Alfred A. Kerkhan, Mrs. Hamilton Willett, Mrs. Edward M. Fieger, Mrs. Joseph R. Bradley, Mrs. Charles S. Williams and Mrs. R. L. Willock. These members, as an additional feature of the annual occasion, served luncheon at cost to the mothers who were in the clubhouse during the noon hour.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

A PROGRAM by a piano duo consisting of Lester Place and Robert Pascocella, and a vocal unit whose members are Taylor Tuckley, baritone, and Carlton Boxill, tenor, will be presented over KDKA and other stations of the NBC System tonight at 8 o'clock. The pianists will open the program with a medley from "A Connecticut Yankee," and also will play "Polly," "Foolin' the Piano," "Fascinatin' Vamp" and "Wedding of the Dolls." Numbers to be presented by the singers will be "Right or Wrong," "Persian Rug" and "Dream River."

A program of ballads will be presented by the Keystone Duo and the Balladeers, an instrumental including KDKA, at 9:30 o'clock. The Keystone Duo, whose members are Steele Jamison, tenor, and Darl Bethmann, baritone, will open and close the program with "Have a Smile," and also will sing "Rose Leaves" and "He Loves and She Loves," from "Funny Face." Stiner's "Plantation" will be sung by Mr. Bethmann as a solo, and Mr. Jamison has selected "The Little Old Garden."

The Goldman Band concert on the campus of New York University will be broadcast over the NBC System, including WCAE, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. Tschaikowsky's "Marche Militaire" will provide the opening, to be followed with Rubinstein's "Kammenoi Ostrow," the immortal portrait of scenes along a picturesque drive just outside of Moscow. Rimsky-Korsakoff contributes two numbers to be heard during the program—his "Hymn to the Sun," from the allegorical opera "Le Coq d'Or," and his ballet-pantomime, "Scheherazade." The schedule also includes Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture" and another Russian number, "The Procession of the Sirdar," by Ippolitow Iwanow.

"SAVE BABIES!" MILK FUND APPEALS

"A bottle of milk a day may save a baby's life!"

So reads an appeal sent out by the Pittsburgh Milk and Ice Association, for nearly 30 years administrator of Pittsburgh's bounty to needy babies. The appeal, printed on a facsimile of a milk bottle, bears on one side the association's slogan, "It is not the babies born, but the babies saved that count," and on the other side, "It is only by continuance of your support that the Association can maintain this work of feeding hungry babies, teaching mothers how to care for them and giving medical attention to the sick."

"A bottle a day may save a baby's life." There are 300 babies at present in the care of the Association. How many babies will you save? How many bottles will you fill?

The Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund, chief support of the Association, totals $348.73, today's additions being from an anonymous friend, "A. N. C.," and from Carol Jean Thompson, who has contributed annually since her advent into the world two years ago.

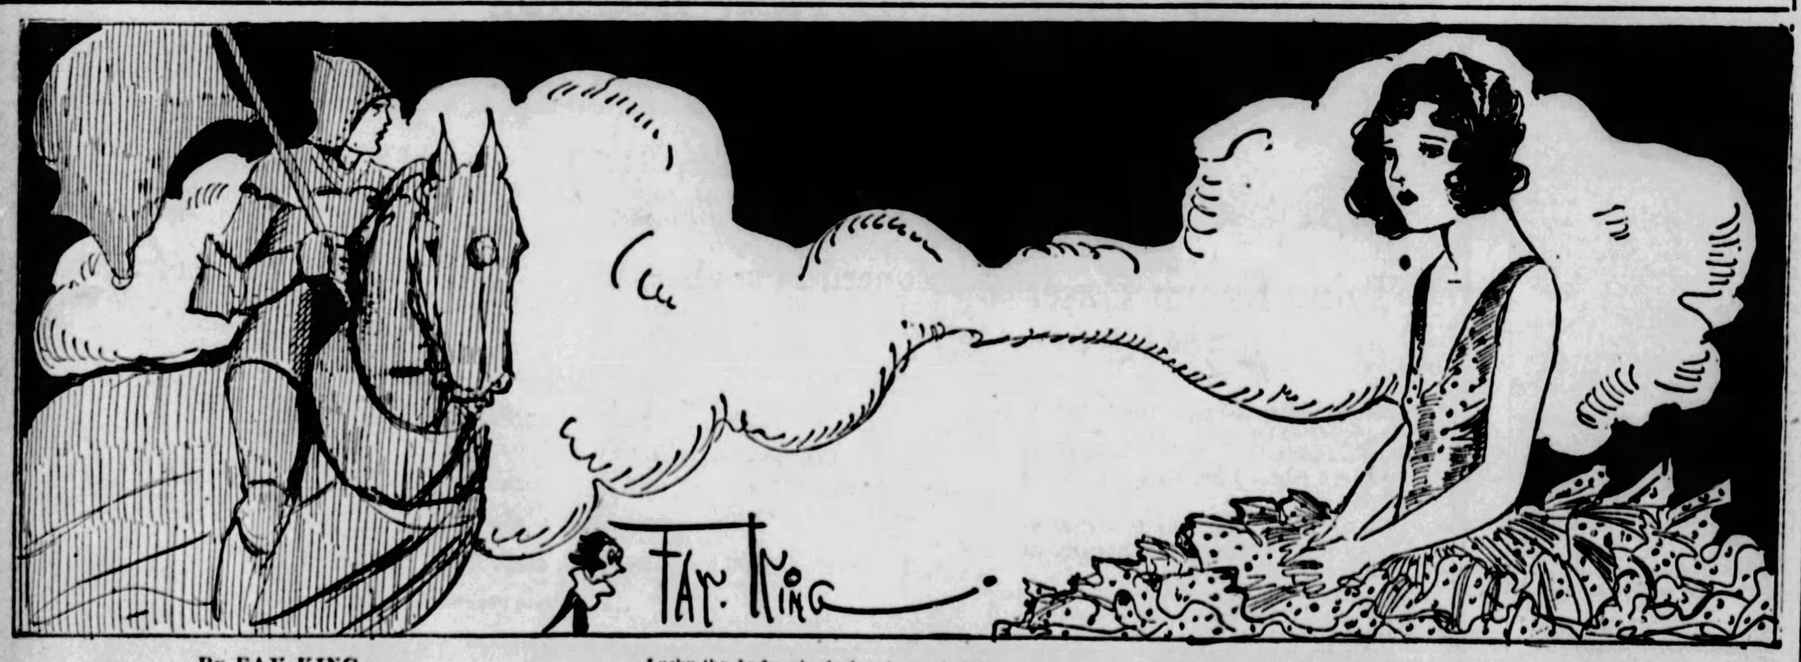
Modern Knight Rates High With Fay King



By FAY KING

A ROMANTIC young lady can no longer look for a handsome young knight to come riding by on his snow-white steed.

But she can still look for the same gracious qualities in her modern young man.

Knights were always loyal, brave young men, with fine ideals. They fought for ... They defended honor.

Lucky the lady who had a brave knight to protect her. No wonder they always fell in love, married, and lived happily ever afterwards.

The modern young man may not look the part, but if he lives it, that is even more important.

He may wear store clothes. His hands may be a bit grimy from the man's work he does in the world. But if he has a brave and good heart he deserves the lady fair.

For the modern young man often fights as hard in the invisible armor he wears, jostling with the world, as ever did the knight of olden times in more spectacular joustings with a lance on horseback to do honor to his lady's colors.

Many a modern knight has fought a hard mental duel with himself for his own honor, and won by passing up the shady crooked lance for success.

Building Castles In the Air

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WE are living at the dawn of "the age of the air." "Dad, I want an airplane."

"Do you think you could handle one, Dick? It requires more careful control than your roadster. One cocktail too many might mean death for yourself, your passengers and those on whom the plane crashed."

Conversations to this general effect are even now taking place, preliminary to the purchase of an airplane. When there is a comfortable fortune, an airplane is no longer an impractical luxury. They are growing more practical, less costly, every day.

Dick got his airplane after learning to fly and proving his dependability at a registered school of aviation.

Nowadays his "best" girl goes out for flights with him. You may be sure she would not trust her life to his care and judgment and feel happy and safe with Dick at the controls, if she were not sure that he is skilful, perfectly self-controlled and temperate.

"Daddy, I want to take a course in aviation," announced Sally, the other evening, after dinner, as she held a match for her father's cigar. Of course he immediately choked over the cigar, pronounced a most emphatic, "No!" and was utterly flabbergasted at the idea.

So Sally went to her favorite professor at the "U" to talk things over.

"Finish your college course—you are only a freshman," counseled the stage professor. "By the time you are a senior, it is likely there will be courses in aeronautics open to you. By that time your father may be used to the idea. Anyway, you can't take your 90 hours in the air until you are 19."

Soon we shall all be flying. And suited to this new, thrilling field for adventure, comes a new chivalry, the code of the "knights of the air."

"The age of chivalry is gone," wrote Edmund Burke, nearly two hundred years ago. "The unbought grace of life, the nurse of heroic enterprise, is gone—at chastity of honor which felt a stain like a wound."

Yes, chivalry passed out with the age of innocence," insists Elizabeth Benson, flapper poetess. "But we girls would not change our happy-go-lucky camaraderie for bowing and scraping young men. . . . If there is to be any adventuring, I prefer to be along, sharing the hardships as well as the fun."

Is chivalry dead? Are we not rather at the dawn of a new chivalry, more glorious than any the world has seen—a natural, unassuming chivalry in which girls may "go along."—?

Can chivalry be dead while a Lindbergh, a Commander Byrd, a Baron Huenefeld, Capt. Koehl and Major Fitzmaurice live, while the memory of Floyd Bennett's immortal sacrifice is fresh in our memories?

"Disinterested courtesy; bravery; elevation of soul, scorning what is mean or base; unselfishness;" these are the dictionary definitions of chivalry. And every normal young man and girl, however hard-boiled he or she may pose as being, adores just such qualities. They are exemplified in most of our aviators. What we adore, we imitate. So who can measure the influence of these modern knights of the air? Their code of honor and honesty, simplicity and sincerity, eager goodwill, desire to serve, their unassuming modesty and fearlessness satisfy the universal hunger for real romance and gallant adventure which makes life colorful, dynamic and worth while.

Old-time chivalry fell down on a mistaken idea, prevalent in its day—that women are frail and helpless, mentally and physically unable to take part in robust adventure. Girls in those days were kept ignorant lest they strain their brains by education and were guarded like hothouse flowers. But modern young women, aside from the restrictions which are part of their education and up-bringing, take their places side by side with young men as pals, comrades and fellow-workers, and adventurers. We have our Huerta Junkers and our Ruth Elders as well as our Chamberlins and Lindberghs. But for all that, women still hold their predominant place as home-makers and happy, contented wives and mothers.

Not because of limitations imposed from without, but because of her own innate nature and ideal of happiness, woman's great role continues to be that of help-meet, blending her life with that of her husband, succeeding through his success, inspiring that success by understanding love and practical aid. Recognition of equality does not prevent men and women from also appreciating certain superiorities which each sex admires in the other. Men pay homage to women for their motherlike capacity for unselfish devotion and for the ideals of love and purity they bring out. Women admire the wisdom and strength of men.

What an inspiration to any man is the perfect, well-grounded faith of the woman he loves! Wholesome romance, sound marriage, affectionate family life are the general rule among our airmen, and are part of the code of modern chivalry, which is not by any means restricted to aviators.

TWO PAINTERS

The Lily-Gilder—a Modernist and the Naturist—an Old-Timer

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

THERE is a lady-like, but persistent, rumor going up and down the Broadways, sauntering up and down the Park avenues, and hurrying up and down the Fifth avenues, of the whole country and all its towns, that paint dry or wet, on feminine cheeks is going! The gossip is everywhere, poking in fashionable court yards and down Greenwich Village passages; sallying about in green, cottage-dotted suburbs and weaving about in the tenements; strolling about in the park and milling in and out of the theaters; in every corner and up every stair; as much everywhere as the girls that it is about are, or as the smell of smoke is. "Cheek-rouge is going," she whispers. Myself, it looks to me as I study, even when I don't mean to, the girl-faces that drift by in an endless ebb and flow, that rouge is already gone among the cleverest girls. Smooth, colorless cheeks go by, one after another. Colorless, or with whatever bit of tint Ma Nature has doled out.

This should be good news to Cupid—first name Dan. For he has lamented the violent daubing of the faces that were his stock in trade. Just a hint, a trifle, a breath, a touch, a soupcon of color is all very well, he thinks. But the average girl is not so delicate! Cupid himself is an artist—who colors with the glowing Spirits of Color from his Celestrial Palette the faces of women and girls; but he is an old-timer, a devoted and reverential limner of nature, academic, restrained, but a lender of hues of the morning to the faces that he paints. And the girl he bumps into when he rounds the drug store corners is a slap-dash artist with no time for finesse and a hankering for raw color laid on in blobs, as with a palette-knife. It looks great that way on the houses in Miami, old Cupid thinks, but not so good on girls' faces!

"She's a painter, and so am I," says he. "But I undergo the shock of my existence a hundred thousand times a day when I get flashes of her handiwork on the streets. Every corner I turn and every door I come out of I am confronted with masks! I wish she'd leave her face to me!"

Good news! The flame, the blazing sunset hue, of orange and raspberry and red-black and grape-purple and Chinese red and Pompeiian terra-cotta rouge put on opaque as though on the side of a barn, is fading and dying down. Eye-black went long ago if some girls only knew it. Lip-red is here yet, as red as the reddest anarchy. But who knows? Girls tire of everything in time, except love. And they may yet give up their flair for painting and leave their faces to him.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Dance for Grace and Symmetry

By MARIA JERITZA.

FEW women—especially while they are still young—need to be advised to dance for grace, health and beauty. We instinctively love to move in measured rhythm. I believe that if you follow your instinct you dance whenever you hear alluring music.

MARIA JERITZA

Of course, I would not be rash enough to advise anyone to burst into impulsive dancing during office hours, for instance. But at moments when you are free to do so follow that impulse and dance through the house when the radio brings a seductive melody or a lively tune floats in the open window from a hand-organ.

Hum with the music and dance a moment or two to improvised steps and swaying movements. You will find yourself smiling. And you will return to your work ever so much more alive, merry and rested, because of the momentary interlude of melody and rhythm.

Tree boughs wave in the wind, grasses sway, butterflies, everything young and full of life moves in joyous dance. Why not tune in by doing a little dancing yourself?

I know a group of young folk who are having great fun meeting once a week to do the lanciers, quadrille, waltz and other old-time dances. They enjoy them more than the Charleston and Black Bottom.

There is much to be said, however, for modern ballroom dances. It takes alertness and quick adjustment and poise to dance through a crowded ballroom without getting in anyone's way or being jostled. But when the air of the hall becomes depleted and thick with smoke the exercise does more harm than food. Alcoholic stimulation while dancing is considered to be one cause of modern heart trouble.

Outdoor dancing is best of all. But be sure to put on your scarf when you stop excising and there is a cool breeze.

Professional dancers are usually winsome, because they live healthfully on plain food to keep up their strength and energy.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Plenty of Minerals Good for Infants

IN the springtime when the chickens were being hatched, all the newspapers carried articles about how to feed the young things. The poultry editor and reporters wrote pages on feeding. "Minerals for the Chicks," "Green Food for the Chicks" — every conceivable bit of advice was printed for the benefit of the poultry raiser.

DR. COPELAND

I applaud this. It speaks well for the enterprise of the newspapers that they print this informative material. It is a sign of progress that the raisers of poultry are eager for the information and follow the instructions.

As I write, I have before me one of these articles. Here is a quotation: "In the care of the chick, if he is to grow to good size, remain vigorous and healthy, and if he is to grow a suitable frame, provide for adequate flesh development, he must have in his diet considerable mineral elements."

Then this sensible writer continues: "Minerals serve two very distinct functions. They are used directly in building bony tissue for the framework of the body. Bone is quite largely lime and phosphorous. In addition, there is a second and even more important function of minerals, and that is to increase the efficiency of the other foods fed."

Here is another wise statement: "There is another function which minerals are assumed to possess, and which is being given more attention, that minerals seem to be able to build up the body, making it able to resist diseases and infections of various kinds. An insufficient amount of mineral not only means poorly grown and small stature and incomplete digestion, but the scarcity also means lowered vitality and tendency to disease."

Every word of this statement can be applied to human beings. It is just as true of babies. There must be minerals for the growth of the baby's bones. He must have lime and phosphorous if he is to thrive.

For the same reason, the baby must have minerals to build up resistance to diseases which are watching for a weak place to make attack. Proper food wards off disease.

One of the reasons why milk is such a valuable food for growing children is because it is rich in minerals. It contains sulphur, phosphate, soda, potash, lime, magnesium, iron and iodine.

The fruits and vegetables carry large percentages of mineral substances. They are necessary additions to the diet of the child.

There is another reason why milk, fruits and vegetables are essential. They contain the mysterious vitamins which have everything to do with growth, health and resistance to disease.

Certainly a baby is just as important as a brood of chicks. Let us use as much scientific care in the feeding of the babies and then we will have a bigger, a healthier and a harder race.

Answers to Health Queries

A. A. Q.—What is a remedy for dandruff?

A.—I would advise you to shampoo your hair frequently, using a good pure soap and apply a stimulating tonic to the scalp every other night.

* * *

F. S. M. Q.—My daughter of 11 complains of her hands bothering her especially the fingers, after her bath when she is ready for bed. What would you advise? She does not complain during the daytime.

A.—Probably a circulatory disturbance. Build up her general health and if the symptom persists, have your doctor examine her.

* * *

A. C. B. Q.—What causes bald spots to appear on the scalp?

A.—This is usually due to "alopecia areata." Every attention should be given to the general health. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.

* * *

T. Q.—How can I reduce my weight?

2.—What causes hiccoughs when drinking carbonated drinks in particular?

A.—Cut down on the amount of sweets and starchy foods in your diet and take regular systematic exercise daily.

2.—You may drink it too fast or on an empty stomach. Hiccoughs are generally due to some intestinal disturbance.

A. R. Q.—My 2-year-old daughter has been spoiled and now when I do not give her what she wants she throws herself down and kicks, crying and making a scene. What can I do?

A.—I would not advise spanking the child—try to reason with her—this will be easier as she grows older. Let her cry and kick when she has one of her spells—she will soon find it is of no avail and will break herself of the habit.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

HOW TO CONQUER A CYNIC

PERADVENTURE, my Daughter, a man shall come unto you saying:

* * *

"Behold, oh fairest among women, I am as putty in thine hands! Yea, I am all devotion! For to serve thy sex is my delight! And before beauty I am weaker than Prohibition wine!"

* * *

But by that token shalt thou know that he is INVULNERABLE; and his words are but thinking cymbals and sounding brass and applesauce!

HELEN ROWLAND

And another shall come unto thee saying, "Behold, I am a cynic and a scorner-of-women. Lo, they are as lemon to my teeth! For I have their numbers, and not one of them do I trust!"

* * *

But, be of good cheer, my Daughter. For he is EASY; and thy way shall be clear before thee.

* * *

Verily, of men there are but three varieties: those that must be driven with whip and a firm rein; those that must be coaxed with sugar; and those that must be blindfolded and "backed" into harness. And the last of these is the CYNIC!

* * *

When thou meetest one of these, I charge thee seek not to dissuade him, neither to convince him. For to break thine argument against thee is his delight. He floateth in his POSE!

* * *

Therefore, agree with him with all thine heart that love is a pitfall and marriage a snare; and that all thy sex is weak and unworthy and full of hollowness!

* * *

And when thou hast disarmed him and all his words are as yesterday's kiss, forgotten, lead him to discourse sweetly of the beauties and joys of MENTAL companionship. Yea, sing its praises with rapture! For this stunt never faileth!

* * *

And when thou hast brought the cushion for his head and the footstool for his feet, and lighted his cigaret with thine own hands, he shall say in his heart:

* * *

"Would to heaven I were not a cynic and a single-footer, and that all women were like unto this one! For she is wise and sane and NOT a man-hunter. And a bachelor's life was never like this!

And in time it shall come to pass that he shall fall down before thee and retract all his words and eat all his cynicism.

* * *

Then shalt thou slip the bridle over his head and the reins shall be in thine hands. And there shall be one less cynic and one less single-footer in the world!

* * *

Verily, verily, the land is full of cynics who mock at women today but shall follow them to the altar tomorrow. For the woman-scorner is as one that singeth in passing a graveyard—because he is AFRAID!

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 1

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows much possibility of reaching for the things of the spirit. It favors mystical, psychical and artistic pursuits of a high order, but in material things there is the menace of rashness and extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of successful new ventures, but these are subject to hazards of speculation and impetuous handling. With conservatism large affairs should prosper. Happy personal contacts are seen.

A child born on this day may be talented and accomplished, possibly in unusual directions. But its success may be negatived by ill-government or a tendency to speculate or to be too adventurous.

Monday, July 2

MONDAY'S astrological forecast favors important affairs with expansion and enterprise in transactions of large initiative. But these may be attended by some unforeseen commotion or disturbance and are also under the hazard of fraud, trickery and misrepresentation unless all writings be signed or contracts made with particular precaution.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of large affairs, with many possibilities for advancement and prosperity, but they should not allow sudden or abrupt situations to upset their good judgment.

A child born on this day may be restless, changeable and adventurous.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TOO MANY SWEETS

By Louise Peple Armstrong

A FEW days after Dolly Winston's return from a trip to New York, she received a telegram from Evelyn Nash.

"Tom," she said to her husband, who had simultaneously finished his coffee and the newspaper and arisen from the breakfast table, "an old friend of mine is coming to stay with us—for a few days. I'm sure you'll like Evelyn Nash. We were chums at boarding school years ago, and I've never seen her since then. You'll have to meet the noon train from Chicago, and drive her out here in time for lunch."

"We-ell," agreed Tom reluctantly. "But I'll have to hurry through lunch and bolt. You'll have to explain to her how terribly busy I am this time of the year."

"Certainly, she'll understand," Dolly assured him.

Their guest proved to be a charming girl—vivacious, petite and dark as Dolly Winston was fair. She had a naive way of stretching her brown eyes wide, parting crimson lips when Tom began to speak. And she seemed to hang upon every word he said. This unusual attention flattered Tom Winston, so that he expanded in a glow of self-satisfaction.

"You really think the drama is losing out?" Eve asked, turning a bewitching face upon him over the simple dessert. "Now I'd been told the influence of the Little Theater Leagues throughout the country would tend to revive—"

"Where are your prominent actors of today?" demanded Tom authoritatively. "Even the Barrymores have gone into the movies! But taking for granted the fact—"

"Tom," interrupted Dolly, trying to keep an impatient tone out of her voice, and conceal an irritation at her husband's complaisancy, "Tom, I don't like interrupting an interesting discussion, but Sam Nettleton phoned 10 minutes ago, and you said tell him you were on your way to the office!"

"All right," replied Tom absently, helping himself to another generous slice of cake. "It's seldom," he added with a fatuous smile at Eve Nash, "I have the pleasure of dining in such charming company."

"I really don't think you should eat any more cake," Dolly cautioned. "Too many sweets always did upset you, Tom!"

Tom looked provoked.

"I don't believe two slices of cake would hurt anybody," observed Eva amiably, and Dolly was astonished to see the grateful look her husband gave their guest.

She was to be more and more astonished as the visit of Eve lengthened itself into a week, and showed no signs of terminating—and at the amazing amount of time her erstwhile busy husband managed to find to entertain the girl.

And so on Saturday morning Dolly called upon Grandma Holworthy, a pained expression in the depths of her violet-blue eyes.

"I believe," she said to the placid little lady who sat by the front window darning, "I verily believe, Grandma, that Tom's being vamped."

"Sit down, my dear child," said Grandma, "tell me what's troubling you."

"I should have come over before," began Dolly contritely, "I wanted to tell you about my trip—but I kept putting it off until I had more time—and then Eve Nash came. I wish Tom had never seen her."

Grandma appeared mildly astonished at the veiled bitterness in Dolly's tone.

"He's being flattered into making a fool of himself," protested the girl. "I told him so frankly this morning—and he accused me of jealousy! People are beginning to smile at me—in a pitying way. Clara Whittaker, who made such a spectacle of herself last year, threatening to leave Bob on account of that trained nurse, stopped me in the street a while ago, and inquired sweetly about 'that fascinating Eve Nash.' Her tone was insinuating! Oh, I'm so ashamed of the way Tom's behaving, Grandma!"

Grandma Holworthy smiled.

"I remember your dad was a naughty boy at times," she observed with seeming irrelevancy, "He'd steal into the cooky jar, and he could never resist jam. Once he actually ate the icing on a cake I'd just baked. I tried spanking, though I don't usually hold with corporal punishment. Finally I hit on a plan to cure his sweet tooth. Your grandpa wouldn't have approved, but he happened to be off on a trip. We planned a whole week of sweets—nothing else. Only cakes and pies for dinner, caramel cream for lunch with gingerbread cookies and chocolate fudge—cakes and maple syrup for breakfast. He helped write out the daily menus and was delighted at the prospect."

Dolly had to laugh. "And did he suffer from tummy-ache all night?" she asked. Funny to think of her dignified father as a naughty little boy, stuffing sweets!

"No," replied Grandma, "but next morning he only wanted toast for breakfast and a glass of milk. I read him the menus he'd helped write, and the child burst into tears! Men are only boys grown up," she added significantly. "They eat feminine flattery as a child eats sweets—but they soon sicken of the too-rich diet and turn back to wholesome things."

Dolly sprang up, her cheeks flushing excitedly. "Grandma," she said, "Tom's going to be positively ill of Eve's silly speeches by the end of the week."

"Atta-girl!" cried Grandma softly, with a mischievous smile on her round, wrinkled little face.

"When did she say she was leaving?" asked Tom Winston. It was 2 a. m., and he growled the question as he struggled out of his tuxedo. "Racing around the country all hours of the night to dances wouldn't be so bad, but being tied hand and foot to a brainless chatterbox is awful! Dolly, why didn't you arrange to have some of the fellows take Eve Nash off my hands? I didn't see you trying!" he added accusingly. "And I almost expired at her everlasting cooing over everything I said!"

Dolly turned to hide a grin. She knew her guest had become aware of Tom's boredom, knew her line was running thin. On the way home Eve had told Dolly of a letter she had received, calling her back to Chicago. And much as she hated to leave her dear friend—

"Why, Tom," she said in mock surprise, "I thought you and Eve got on famously. You seemed to enjoy her so I've been on the verge of asking her to stay out the month!"

Tom turned on her savagely, opened his mouth in angry protestation; but he caught the gleam of laughter in her eyes. The next instant she was grasped in a bear-hug, and Tom was rumpling her hair, his manner of affectionate retaliation when she had gotten the best of him in a battle of wits.

"You called me jealous!" she challenged him.

"You accused me of being vamped!" Tom retorted. Then he laughed, and Dolly felt that once again their differences had vanished into air. "You certainly punished me severely for a little admiration to your pretty, empty-headed guest! Gosh, I never got to tired of anyone in my life—so fed up on silly compliments!"

"Too many sweets!" murmured Dolly beneath her breath, remembering Grandma's advice. But she didn't tell Tom of her strategy.

"What a relief it'll be to have her go," observed Tom, buttoning his pajama jacket, yawning and switching off the light. "A silly woman—she gives me a pain!"

He didn't understand why Dolly should laugh so uproariously in the dark at his remark.

Two Stolen Idols

By FRANK L. PACKARD

Mindar Singh Comes To Bob for Shelter From Chen-Shu

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. After many adventures Bob and Verna Lyle are both prisoners at Richardson's plantation. The Malay whom Bob had rescued plans Verna's and Bob's escape. Bob, still bound, is carried to safety by the Malay. Bob plans to leave Verna with friends in Kalawa. Bob finds one Idol and discovers it holds a message in cypher. He starts for Singapore determined to solve the mystery. He visits Java Dick and meets old friends where he finds out many things of unusual interest. Java Dick promises Bob his help.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"YOU needn't say it!" said Bob Kingsley, in an almost sobered voice. "That's good enough for me!" He put out his hand. "Shake!" And then, his fingers tingling with the grip he received in return, for the strength in the drawf-like creature's hands, was that of two men: "Good-night, Java! I'm not going to forget this!"

"That's all right, Black Bob," Java Dick answered easily. "Maybe some day you'll do something for me. Good-night!"

The black shadows of the alleyway hid Java Dick—and clambering presently into a jinrickshaw, Bob Kingsley ordered the coolie to take him to the waterfront.

CHAPTER XLI.

BOB KINGSLEY sat up in his bunk; and, though aroused out of a sound slumber, was instantly alert. It could not have been more than an hour since he had returned to the schooner from Java Dick's, and, after giving orders to Nanu that a strict watch be kept, had gone to bed—and now Nanu was calling from the outer cabin.

"Yes! What is it, Nanu" he demanded.

"It was the Tuan's orders that he be called if anything happened," Nanu answered. "There is a man who has come out from shore alone in a boat, and who asks for speech with the Tuan. If his words are true, he was the servant of the Tuan's uncle at Kalawa, and his name is Mindar Singh. Is it the Tuan's orders that he come aboard?"

Mindar Singh! Bob Kingsley leaped from his bunk to his feet; and then, jerking aside the curtain, which, for greater comfort's sake in the heat of the tropics, fulfilled the functions of a door to the single stateroom that the Alita possessed, he stepped out into the main cabin.

"Light the lamp, Nanu!" he ordered tersely. "And then bring the man down here at once!"

Nanu lighted the swinging lamp over the table and departed.

Bob Kingsley crossed the cabin to a stand of drawers, procured a package of cigarets, lighted one, thrust the package into his pajamas pocket, and flung himself down into a chair beside the table facing the companionway. Outwardly calm, his blood was running hot with excitement. Mindar Singh! What was it Java Dick had said? That Mindar Singh had run away, or got away from Chen-shu, or something—and that, as Java Dick had gathered, it would go very ill indeed with Mindar Singh if Chen-shu ever got his claws on the man again? What was at the bottom of that? What was the meaning of it? Java Dick had not known. He, Bob Kingsley, did not know. But it promised a great deal! And then, besides, here at last was the only man who might probably be able to give some coherent account of what had actually happened that night when Hsi Yan had gone ashore at Kalawa.

He, Bob Kingsley, had talked with Crowley two days ago in Kalawa. Crowley still knew nothing more than he had set down in the letter he had sent to Patua. They had discussed Mindar Singh's mysterious disappearance from all angles, even down to the man's personality and habits, in the hope that they might thereby obtain some clew to what might have taken place—but at the end had been no further advanced than when they had begun. And then a possible solution had occurred to him. Crowley did not know about that secret passage built for self-protection long ago in the more lawless days when Tom Kingsley had lived practically alone on Kalawa. There was a bare chance that Mindar Singh might be in there—dead. They had gone to the house and examined the passage; but it was quite empty, and they had been obliged to fall back again upon useless speculation. As a matter of fact, until a few hours ago when Java Dick had spoken of the man, he, Bob Kingsley, had come to the conclusion that Mindar Singh was dead. As it was now, it was more likely that the reason for the man's disappearance was— But why speculate again! Crowley said Mindar Singh spoke English readily from his years of house service—and here was the man to answer for himself.

Bob Kingsley straightened up in his chair, as a tall, gaunt figure, that of an East Indian in a ragged turban, his clothing soiled and torn, came down the companionway, and, halting before him, made a profound obeisance.

"Sahib," the man said earnestly, "I am Mindar Singh, who was the servant of the Sahib's uncle, Kingsley Sahib. I have suffered evil things for many days since the night Hsi Yan [illegible]ght destruction upon my master's house, and even now I am in a great danger, and I have come to the Sahib for shelter. Is it in the Sahib's mind that what I say is true, for his eyes have never seen my face before?"

Bob Kingsley jumped to his feet, and laid his hand impulsively on the other's shoulder.

"You're Mindar Singh, all right!" he said heartily. "I'd know you anywhere from Mr. Crowley's description. And if it's shelter from Chen-shu you're talking about—and from what I've heard tonight I fancy there's no doubt on that score—you've come to the right place to get it!"

Mindar Singh inclined his head.

"Sahib," he said, a sudden hoarseness in his voice, "it is from Chen-shu and the dogs that are with him, and were with Hsi Yan at Kalawa that I have fled. Likewise, it is because of the Sahib's presence here in Singapore that I have made my escape, for it was in my mind that I would find protection with him even as he has said, for elsewhere there was none and I would then have but risked my life to no end in that which I have done."

Bob Kingsley dropped back into his chair again.

"I don't know how you knew I was here, Mindar Singh," he said, "but no matter about that now. As it is, there's no man I'd rather see than you." He gave a short, hard laugh. "I'd like to hear about Chen-shu—and those others! Tell me about them! And I want to know about that night at Kalawa, too!"

"Sahib, the tale is one," Mindar Singh answered, "for the ending of the tale is tonight, and the beginning is the coming of Hsi Yan to Kalawa. Is it the Sahib's wish that I speak first of tonight, or of that which befell the Sahib's uncle, of which I, Mindar Singh, his servant, was a witness?"

"A witness!" Bob Kingsley leaned eagerly forward. "Good! I hoped if you were ever found that you would be able to tell us the whole story. Begin, then, at the beginning, Mindar Singh."

For a moment Mindar Singh was silent as though lost in thought; then, with his arms folded across his breast, he began to speak:

"I do not say that I can tell all, Sahib, for in truth the ears of man have never listened to stranger things, nor the eyes seen stranger sights than those that I, Mindar Singh, saw and heard in the house of the Sahib's uncle that night, and some of those things, Sahib, I did not comprehend. But what I know, the Sahib shall know, and the tale runs thus:

"Sahib, it had just grown dark when a Chinese junk of great size came in and anchored in front of Kingsley Sahib's house, which, as the Sahib knows, stands alone on the shore and not near the town or near to any other house. From the junk there came ashore a boatload of Chinese and they carried with them to Kingsley Sahib's house a Chinaman who was sick unto death. And I, Mindar Singh, was alone in the house with Kingsley Sahib, for the other servants had gone to their own quarters, which, as the Sahib knows, are at the back of the cleared ground."

Mindar Singh paused, and, with suddenly outflung arms, gestured impotently.

"The tale is not easy to relate, Sahib," he said. "They had asked no permission to bring the sick man into the house. They came in through the open doors from the veranda to the large room that the Sahib knows is next to the dining room; and to me, Mindar Singh, who was alone in the room at the time, they gave no heed when I spoke to them. And when I ran to find Kingsley Sahib. When I returned with Kingsley Sahib the sick man was lying on the rattan couch that was near to the table and near to the veranda doors, and those who had brought him he had sent away. And the sick man put out his hand to Kingsley Sahib, but Kingsley Sahib did not take the hand. Kingsley Sahib's face was very white, and there was in his eyes which was not good to see. Does the Sahib understand?"

"That part of it—too well!" said Bob Kingsley grimly. "And what then, Mindar Singh?"

"And then, Sahib, the sick man spoke. But not as men of his race speak a tongue that is not their own, for he spoke as the Sahib's themselves speak. And yet, Sahib, he spoke with great difficulty, for he was very weak, and the mark of death was in his face. 'Why do you refuse your hand to a dying man who has come to make peace with you at the last, Capt. Tom, and to ask forgiveness for the years that are gone?' he said. And Kingsley Sahib answered: 'What deviltry is this, Hsi Yan?'

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Finds Katherine in a Very Dejected Mood

IT was a good thing for me, I fancy, that I faced an imminent minor controversy with Dicky. It helped me put aside the larger one which involved our whole future lives—together or apart. But I knew that at the first opportunity after Dicky's arrival at the farmhouse he would call me to account for my tutoring of Eleanor Lincoln at Philip Veritzen's behest.

I meant to choose my own time for his opportunity, however. I had no desire to pile any fagots upon the fire of his anger, and with a gulle in which every wife of experience is adept, I determined that there should be no chance for him to speak to me on the subject before the dinner of his favorite dishes which I already had instructed Katie to prepare for his home-coming.

There was only one sure way of accomplishing that purpose, and that was not to see him alone before dinner. Indeed, I realized that neither Mother Graham nor Junior nor even Lillian would be any bar to his explosive calling me to account upon a minor point of difference such as this was. Katherine, however, would be an effective barrier to any diatribes on Dicky's part. He emphatically likes my cousin's wife, but he stands a bit in awe of her, and I knew he would say nothing concerning the tutoring while she was within hearing.

I must make sure of Katherine's presence in the car when, according to our usual routine, I drove down with Junior and his grandmother to meet Dicky at the station. Rarely, if ever, did anyone save occasionally Marion, accompany us, and I hurried to the little nurse's room, to forestall her making any other arrangements for that hour.

There was no answer to my knock at her door, and I went on to a little balcony over the side veranda where she often sits busy with books or sewing, and where she can give an occasional glance at Junior playing in the yard below. But there was no book in her hand and the sewing basket near her was closed. Her head was resting upon her hand, her elbow upon the arm of her chair and she was staring into vacancy with so tragic an expression on her face that I caught by breath in sudden fear for her. Then I saw that in her other hand hanging by her side there was clutched a letter and on the floor lay an envelope which I recognized as one of the expensive and modish kind in which Dr. Hal Meredith enclosed his letters to her. I needed no other reason for that look upon my old friend's face.

For the famous alienist had not kept his promise to write no word to Katherine for a year following the tragic death of his wife, Lucia. For several months, indeed, he was silent, to her, but addressed occasional short notes to me asking for news of her. These I answered in the perfunctory manner which their form demanded, but I had received none for several weeks, while letters with European postmarks bearing Katherine's name had begun to appear regularly at the farmhouse.

I did not know whether or not she was answering those letters which I guessed were filled with impassioned appeals from the man who had loved her and lost her in their youth, only to find her again when both were married, his marital experience a tragedy and hers but little better. But I knew that Katherine, torn between her loyalty to her husband, and a revival of the wild romantic affection she had given Hal Meredith was suffering tortures with the advent of every letter from the alienist.

Back of the Gas Valve

TURN a valve . . . . at that instant a ready supply of gas flows forth to meet the match.

Have you ever wondered how the gas gets there . . . . why it always is there any time you want it . . . . what it takes to put it there?

The first element of your gas system is money. It took millions upon millions of dollars of invested capital to establish and develop this company to the point where it can assure a dependable gas supply to every home, building and industrial plant on its lines.

Next, it took wells . . . . thousands of them . . . . . all drilled on a gamble. Many were dry holes or soon went dry.

Then it took pipe lines . . . . more than 3,200 miles of pipe of all sizes from 2 to 30 inches in diameter.

And next, 30 compressing stations . . . . among them one of the world's largest . . . . to pump gas from far off regions of West Virginia and from the upper reaches of Clarion County.

Following came pressure control stations, hundreds of distribution line regulators with buildings to house them, thousands of domestic service line regulators and more than 120,000 meters.

Lastly, to operate and control the system it takes an army of men and women recruited from practically every profession and trade.

All this machinery and equipment, every well and every foot of pipe line, every worker in field or office . . . . every effort is pointed to the one purpose of providing an adequate supply of gas to heat a room or heat a home, cook your meals, provide hot water, dry the washing, operate your gas refrigerator, incinerate rubbish and refuse or operate a steel mill.

The whole system constantly is standing back of every appliance, ready at the instant you turn the valve to deliver the most convenient, cleanest and most satisfactory fuel known to mankind.

THREE HELD AS ELIZABETH BOMBERS

Army Planes Join Search for Air Mail Pilot

Sought

WALTER HARRIS

Failure of Mrs. Ellen Harris, 5363 Keystone street, to hear from her son, Walter, 21, since May 6 when he was in Nebraska on a motorcycle trip, has resulted in her asking attaches of the Missing Persons Bureau to aid in the search.

3 HELD IN BOMBING

Three suspects in the Elizabeth "barber war" bombing were jailed, without bail, today, after making signed confessions, according to county detectives.

James Maley, a miner, Joseph Tortoice and Bill Rubino, barbers, of Elizabeth, were held for court by Burgess W. P. Caldwell, of Elizabeth, last night charged with felonious use of explosives and today, detectives say, made complete statements.

Maley, expert in the use of dynamite, through his occupation as a miner, detectives say, "peached" when he received only $5 instead of a $25 fee for placing the bomb on the door step of Richard Kaeslin's barber shop in the Hunt Building, Elizabeth, early Thursday. Arrest of Tortoice and Rubino followed.

Statements by the three, it is said, revealed the bombing to have resulted from strife between barbers of Elizabeth.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR "TRAFFIC COP?"

HE SHOULD BE A FRIEND OF YOURS

Wouldn't you like to drive to the office in the morning and speak thusly to your favorite "traffic cop" when he beams upon you—as though nothing ever happened to make him angry!—passing: "Good morning, Officer Rafferty"—or else, yell, "Hi Teddy!" Well, The Sun-Telegraph's series "Traffic Cops," will tell you how. This fellow today may be found downtown, but don't spend the day hunting; for him when The Sun-Telegraph will tell you his name Monday.

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS P. J. BAUER, 155 LUNA STREET, WHO RULES OLIVER AVENUE AND WOOD STREET. BAUER HAS BEEN IN SERVICE ONLY ONE YEAR AND IS A RELIEF MAN.

MISSING TWO DAYS

ST. LOUIS, June 30.—(AP.)—Civilian and Army pilots of Missouri and Arkansas joined today in the search for Leslie M. Smith, air mail pilot of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, who has been missing since 7:10 o'clock Thursday night, when he took off at Little Rock bound for St. Louis with news photographs of the Democratic National Convention.

Several planes have been pressed into the quest, and regular Army and National Guard planes have been employed at Little Rock to cruise the densely wooded and sparsely populated Ozark hills in the hope of finding the pilot safe after a forced landing.

Six planes returned at dusk last night after unsuccessfully searching the wooded territory between St. Louis and Hunter, Mo., 120 miles away, where a plane was heard roaring through a storm at 8:40 p. m. Thursday.

Smith was regarded by his employers as an excellent pilot, having a record of eight months in the St. Louis-Chicago air mail service without a mishap.

Frances Hayden Turns Over the Rossiter Work to Emily

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and Kitten are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily has made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Halden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her and tells her the only aristocracy is that of work. She gets a job with Mrs. Halden. Her father dies and Rossiter offers help, which her mother declines. Kitten, Emily's sister, is going with a wild crowd and is running close to danger. Ted tries to show Kitten that wild parties don't pay. Every morning Emily finds roses on the doorknob from Kingdon Coles. Marty goes in Judge Morrow's office, Emily is jealous.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"WHAT you, Emmy? Madam says tell Mrs. Haiden will she come right up."

"Won't tomorrow do? You see—"

Mrs. Briggs whispered hoarsely: "They's others been hanging around here, Emmy. You'd better not be puttin' it off now she's in the mind, I'm tellin' you." And she clattered the receiver as one who had done her duty.

Emily held the telephone in a frozen, stupid way till it began to make squawking noises; then she, too, hung up. She decided she must see Mrs. Rossiter and explain.

No time now for the message to Atlantic City; she'd send that afterward. She jammed a little felt hat down over her hair, darting a glance into the mirror, and started almost running up the River road.

Hurrying through the gates at Highcliffe she had a sudden, piercing memory of the other time she had come here and of her illusion that Kent would be waiting at the steps. Smiling down at her with his blue eyes so merry, so quizzical.

He was not there, though, nor would he be ever, waiting for her. Life was like that; she had seen it when she was only a little girl, even before Anne Morrow's party. Things shining so, all soft and glowing, a way off and going dull when you came up to them. That was life.

Now she remembered Kent was home; even today he might be here—meet her as she came through the door.

That brought her to a stop; she cowered back, half minded to flee.

But it was only an impulse, over in a flash. She went on with her chin a little higher, more sedately, and was shown to a library in the north wing.

Mrs. Rossiter awaited her here. A young looking woman, not at all like Kent but rather like Avis she was, beautiful in a faded way. She wore a smart sport suit and Emily got the impression that she intended going out at once and could be interrupted only a moment. Later on she came to know that restlessness for a characteristic of Kent's mother.

"I came to tell you—" Emily began.

Mrs. Rossiter paid no attention. "What I've been planning," she said, hurriedly, "was something in the way of green velvet hangings, leaf green perhaps—"

"But it's a north room!" Emily protested. "Cedars outside the windows—oh, not green, Mrs. Rossiter. Monotonous—why, you'd never like it!"

The finely arched brows went up. "You have a suggestion?"

"Oh, yellow and orange—wonderful against those dark branches. And why would you have velvet? Glazed chintz would bring in the light so."

They planned. Emily forgot she was in Kent's home, talking to Kent's mother, and that she had come only to excuse Frances' absence. She offered suggestions and Mrs. Rossiter first rejected them and then took them back, one by one.

"I might like this; that might be an improvement," she kept saying.

Finally it was all arranged and Emily was going down the River road, rather in a panic.

"I shouldn't have done that—should have waited for Frances. Not my place, not my right. Indeed—oh, indeed—"

She went to the telegraph office and sent her message, an apologetic little entreaty that made the clerk smile.

And she met Frances at the train next morning, half crying.

"Maybe you'll never forgive me. I didn't realize—well, you see she wanted green velvet right against the cedars. And after that I forgot I wasn't you. And if you're offended I'll just die!"

"Nonsense, my dear. Never go back on anything you've done that's your best. I dare say your taste is better than mine. We'll see now."

They talked it over. Frances preferred red to orange but said that was a matter of liking.

"What you've got to learn now," she went on, "is to hold Mrs. Rossiter to her choice. Women of her sort are changeable, you know."

"You'll be taking it over now, dear Frances. You'll be doing it now."

"Not at all. You're not to confess failure, or the fear of it, by giving up your effort to another no matter whom that one may be. There's always the chance your own thought may be best. Anyway it's your duty to see it through."

So it was Emily who supervised the redecorating of the north wing at Highcliffe. Each day she walked by the tall gates and up the drive, always with a flutter at her heart, the hope and the fear that this time she would meet Kent.

But she never met him.

She brought in workmen and told them what to do; she conferred with Mrs. Rossiter over glazed chintz and wall tintings; a dozen times she shyly argued that lady away from the notion of undoing all that had been done and starting over on something else.

There were mornings when she took from the shop door the box of flowers Kingdon Coles sent her and forgot to open it; evenings when she telephoned him she could not keep engagements they had made. He grew rather impatient with it all but she didn't know that. Her whole mind was on her work.

The few letters Marty wrote from the Midlands fared no better. She read the first two hastily and the third she tucked into the pocket of her sweater and forgot. He didn't write again.

AL, JOE AND HARMONY—ROGERS

By WILL ROGERS.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30.—Well, boys, she blowed up yesterday noon in a blaze of harmony.

Joe Robinson of Arkansas got the nomination with more Democrats agreeing than had ever agreed on one thing in the history of the party.

They got a great fellow in Joe. He is a real two-fisted he-candidate.

He comes from the wilds of Arkansaw where they are hard to tame. I have had one in my house for 20 years, and there is just no managing 'em.

As usual the nominating speeches brought out names that sounded like a new immigration list.

The old sovereign state of Oklahoma upheld her reputation for not even comedy.

JAMS THE WORKS

Everybody was in a hurry and sweating and all the states were voting on the Smith nomination when it got to them. Course they didn't agree, and the whole 15,000 people had to stop for half an hour while they called their names, and instead of sending 20 there was 40 come with half a vote each.

You would think that if a delegation stayed here a week they would know how to announce their vote.

But Mississippi saved Oklahoma's record for when it got to them they acted a bigger fool.

To my friend, Governor Ritchie, goes the record for stealing second with the bases loaded, for the first time in any convention. You would pretty near tell that Ritchie was a wet without him announcing it.

Somebody in nominating their candidate told about him having been in Alaska, Germany, England, Russia and Cuba and South America. I couldn't think of any American that had been all those places but Herbert Hoover, but it wasn't, it was General Allen.

MRS. JOE TO HELP

Mrs. Joe Robinson went over when Joe was nominated to the box of Mrs. Alfred E. Smith and told her that at all public receptions that she would be glad to take care of the overflow over at her house.

Women seconded and nominated as often as they got the chance, and they were just as bad as usual.

Senator Gore of Oklahoma made the best speech of the entire convention in seconding Jim Reed's nomination.

Jim Reed, bless his old fighting heart, took the floor at 12 o'clock, and didn't "turn the rascals out" till 1:30.

Had a chat with Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Lady Astor's sister. She was on the New York delegation. They are natural politicians, that gang.

The platform I will discuss later. A man read it Thursday night, perhaps the last man that will ever read it.

Well, it's been a great time. These Democrats are a great bunch. Just as happy as if they were working.

TOO MUCH OF IT

Houston, the police, the people, everything, was great. And so was Kansas City. I tell you it was two fine conventions.

But Lord, I have looked at enough badges and heard enough speeches that if I ever hear another man say: "The Grand Old Republican Party" or, "Back to the Jeffersonian Principles," I will go to the gallows with a clear conscience. I just want to go back home and go to sleep for a month.

All the speakers said, "we are making history." Well, I don't want to be disrespectful to their party, but I am just tired of seeing history being made. I have got to go home and take care of my own campaign.

Goodbye, Houston, take care of yourself. But don't ever bid for another of these things. You might get it.

I got to get back to Beverly Hills and see Mary Pickford's haircut.

Good night, everybody, I hope the next election is a draw and they have to run it off. This is Graham McNamee and Captain White signing off, and swearing off from all conventions.

Come on airplane, let's show these delegates how to travel.

Yours,
WILL.

BUGS BAER Says

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30.

TEX SMITH and Tex Robinson will be the Arkansas-New York team in the November Olympics.

Looks like the crown jewels of America will consist of a brown derby studded with compromises.

The Democrats didn't say much about the liquor question. They didn't want to spill it.

Kansas City also preserved a liquid silence about booze.

The trouble with the entire situation is that every time a bootlegger is arrested he is either a Democrat or a Republican.

They should have accepted the Bugs Baer compromise on the rum rebus.

We dashed into executive session and suggested an idea that would have pleased both wet and dry.

That was a dry plank with a bunghole in it.

We must object to Democratic abuse of the last two putrid administrations as unfair to organized bribery.

The Republicans can't abuse the Democrats in return because the Demmies haven't had a chance to be bad during the last eight years.

This convention lasted four days. That's 17 days less than the Frankfurter-eating contest in Madison Square Garden.

There were some great speeches during this convention. The Democratic orators work the chain system. Each one explains what the previous guy said.

Robinson is a fighter. He holds a decision over a golf partner on the Chevy Chase links. He also whipped a convention clerk at San Francisco in 1920.

They say Hoover cannot make a speech. That will not stop him and Curtis from getting on the radio and singing duets.

The Democratic leaders showed no shyness in taking the air. They've been taking it for eight years.

We don't think the flappers will vote for Al. Every intelligent American girl knows that the place for a brown derby is on a saxaphone.

2 DRIVERS HELD IN AUTO DEATH

A fracture of the skull suffered when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a motor truck caused the death of James Vandura, 46, of 2642 Converse street, in the South Side hospital last night. The accident occurred at Hammond street and Zephyr avenue yesterday afternoon.

Pietro Mercuri of 2502 Glenmawr avenue was driving the machine in which Vandura was riding and Ignatius Morreato of 2632 Penn avenue was driving the truck, according to police. Both drivers were ordered to appear in the office of the coroner to give bond pending an inquest.

PADDLED WITH BRUSH WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

Her husband chastised her with a hair brush, Janet R. Muldowney, 205 Lathrope street, stated in seeking a divorce from James Muldowney. The libellant, whose case was presented before Judge Harry H. Rowand in Common Pleas Court through her counsel Ben Paul Brasley, said that Muldowney administered bodily chastisement to his wife on numerous occasions and he had forced her to leave him. Muldowney is charged with cruel and barbarous treatment.

BOYS PLAY WITH GUN, ONE FATALLY SHOT

BERWICK, Pa., June 30.—(AP.)—Investigation revealed that Charles L. Kitchen, 12, was shot and killed by his playmate, Frank Kocher, 13, while playing with a shotgun, near his home. It was at first reported that the lad had accidentally shot himself. A jury returned a verdict of accidental death and held the Kocher boy blameless.

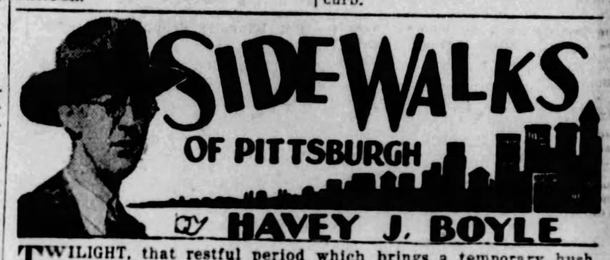
SHARON ELECTRICIAN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 30.—John Barker, 38, chief electrician of the Sharon Steel Hoop Company, was killed yesterday when his coupe overturned near Salem, Columbiana county. He died shortly after of a fractured skull, in the Salem Clinic Hospital. Barker was born in Pittsburgh, but for 11 years lived in Sharon.

Gangster Shots Miss

CHICAGO, June 30—(AP.)—An unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Edward (Spike) O'Donnell, whom the police characterize as the dean of Chicago beer runners, was made last night, the attackers following closely the methods employed in slaying Big Tim Murphy Tuesday night.

O'Connell was fired on from a curtained automobile as he stood in front of his home. He saved himself by dropping to the ground behind a motorcar parked at the curb.



by HAVEY J. BOYLE

TWILIGHT, that restful period which brings a temporary hush between the business madness and hurry of the day and the rush and scurrying to the amusements at night, was melting into approaching darkness at Grant street and Fifth avenue. A street corner evangelist was in the midst of a tirade against the world, the flesh and the devil. His clothes were baggy and the collar he wore seemed untidy. It was too large. A necktie, tied clumsily, seemed to lack the usual relationship between it and the collar. The large collar was at least comfortable for it permitted the extra large Adam's apple of the speaker to move up and down like a well-oiled mechanism.

There was a Bible in one hand—a Bible well-worn from many leafings, and the man flourished the Bible as a warrior might handle a familiar weapon. The orator was suiting the action to the word. Thus, a verbal sortie against Satan and his imps was accompanied with meaningful gestures toward a region below the pavement. The orator's hell, it was apparent, was no further away than the sub-cellar of the building he stood in front of. Heaven seemed farther away as it took a longer sweep of the arm to indicate Paradise.

ONLY four or five sinners were sufficiently interested to stop and listen to the exhortation of the street corner prophet. But he was so wrapped up in his theme that he lost no enthusiasm. Apparently, he was accustomed to small congregations. Indeed, his rapture in the more pleasant part of the picture he drew prompted his eyes to close the better to use his inner vision, uncontaminated with the sights of the sinful world about him. Only when he spoke of Lucifer did the orator allow his eyes to challenge all about him.

While owning a professional tone and showing knowledge of the artifices of the pulpit voice, the man plainly was not solely engaged in reforming the world. A free hand that he raised showed a callous. Constant scrubbing had not conquered greases around his nails. A mill man, by day, a soldier of militant righteousness by night.

* * *

AT LAST he was finished, and he mopped his brow. He now abandoned his oratorical inflections as he called back to a girl of 14 sitting at a small organ close by. "Turn to Number 46, Gertrude," he said in a kindly tone. Obediently, the child leafed a hymnbook in front of her. His daughter, was the surmise, for the melancholy coming from a world gone awry that hovered about the father's eyes was to be found in modified form in the eyes of Gertrude.

* * *

Gertrude had listened patiently, but not too attentively to the sermon of her father. Her attitude suggested it was a true story, to be sure, yet an old one. Once, while the father with closed eyes harangued the imps of the lower regions, Gertrude looked speculatively at the silk stockings of a girl who passed by hurriedly.

THE four or five listeners started moving away as Gertrude and her father began singing No. 46 and, while the hymn was dedicated to glory, there was more of the forlorn than the hopeful in Gertrude's voice. Heaven, at that moment to 14-year-old Gertrude, seemed so remote compared to the dazzling bulbs of the devil's world that now, with twilight gone, were beginning to jump and sparkle.

"That was fine, my child," the orator said. "God bless you. God bless everyone." They gathered up their belongings and walked away. The man had his hand on Gertrude's shoulder.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Kremer Has Lost More Games Than Any Other Pitcher in Majors—Phils Have Had Dozen Pilots in 26 Years—Dukes and Thiel To Meet at Forbes Field or Pitt Stadium.

REMY KREMER, Pirate pitcher, only a few months ago looked upon as the best hurler in the U. S. A., and two years in succession leader of the National League moundsmen, is seemingly on the road to lead the league again, but this time in the matter of games lost.

Clarence Mitchell

Once it required almost airtight pitching on the part of any opposing moundsmen to win a decision over Kremer, but practically any old flinger can do it now with his eyes shut. Yesterday, it was poor old Clarence Mitchell, who wasn't good enough for even the tail-end Phillies, but who outpitched Kremer and held the Pirates runless until Paul Waner made a home run in the ninth with the bases full.

DECENT pitching for Pittsburgh earlier in the game might have made Waner's wallop and four runs worth while, but as it was it counted for nothing as far as changing the result of the contest was concerned.

Kremer has lost more games than any other pitcher in either league, yesterday's being his eleventh defeat. Against 11 defeats he has won only four games. Of his last nine games, he has lost seven. Ordinarily the thing to do with such a pitcher would be to give him an immediate rest, but with Hill, Miljus and Meadows also unable to win, what's to be done about it?

IF the Buccaneers are to get anywhere they have got to start at once, and getting them started wtih only one real pitcher available is a problem that makes Donie Bush's managerial job the toughest in the big show.

The most serious part of the Pirates' slump during the first half of the season is that they have fallen down most woefull against the club they had most to fear. Out of 10 games played with St. Louis they have lost all but one. If they had merely broken even in those 10 games, as seemed very reasonable to expect at the start, St. Louis today would be in first place by only one game, or seven points, and Pittsburgh would be only five games below first place.

George Moriarty

ANOTHER club that seems to be on the road this year to make a record that it will not relish, is Detroit.

True, it is a long way to the finish line, and George Moriarty's Bengals have 87 games more to play, so that there is still time for many things that will be favorable to Detroit's cause.

But right now the Tigers are in last place, two and a half games behind Boston, and if they finish there it will be the first experience of the kind in their American League history. They have finished seventh four times—in 1902, 1904, 1918 and 1920—but they are the only club in the American League that never has finished eighth.

THOUGH Tommy Loughran, world's light-heavyweight champion, was far below par in his work against Armand Emanuel, whom he beat easily Thursday night, you can't take away from the fact that he is a willing champion who is ready to take any of them on without a series of tiresome waits.

When he meets Leo Lomski again on August 8 in Brooklyn, a championship match for which he signed late yesterday, it will be his fourth defense in 10 months of the title he won on October 7, 1927, from Mike McTigue.

RUSSELL WRIGHTSTONE, though with only two clubs in the National League, has played under seven managers—six while with the Phillies and one since joining the Giants.

When he considered the rapid changes in Philadelphia and reflected that McGraw had been boss of the Giants since 1902, he expressed the opinion that since McGraw started the Phils must have had several other pilots besides the six he played under.

John J. McGraw.

RUSSELL was right. Since McGraw followed George Smith and Horace Fogel as Giant manager in 1902, the Phillies have had no fewer than 12 pilots, as follows, and in the order named: William Shettsline, Chief Zimmer, Hugh Duffy, Billy Murray, Red Dooin, Pat Moran, Jack Coombs, Gavey Cravath, Irving Whilhelm, Arthur Fletcher, Stuffy McInnis and Burt Shotton.

JOHN D. HOLOHAN, new graduate manager of athletics at Duquesne University, is stepping right out in a manner that indicates he means to bring the Dukes into greater prominence than they ever occupied before. They are going to play a game on a big time field next season.

PIRATES TRIMMED AGAIN BY CARDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, June 30.—The Pirate "pitching staff," in a manner speaking, will try to put the floundering ship back to something near an even keel this afternoon. Burleigh Grimes, the only member of the Freebooters' slab staff who seems certain of finishing something he starts, has the mound assignment for the third game with the Cardinals, according to Manager Donie Bush.

To counter-act the influences of Burleigh and his feared spitball, Bill McKechnie will trot out a candidate named Grover Cleveland Alexander, who is in favor of free trade, but against free tariff to first base. The Nebraska farmer has been doing his trick for more than 20 years without asking for much relief, but the Pirates are trusting he will have to have some help today.

Smarting under the sting of two painful defeats in the two battles staged, the Buccos today were in anything but a jovial mood. They would like nothing better than to shell Alexander or any other Redbird right off the hill.

BURLEIGH DOING GREAT

The remainder of the slab staff "shot" Grimes is carrying quite a load, but Burleigh dotes on action. He would have accepted a relief call yesterday, but the Buccos took such a plastering from Clarence Mitchell that Bush wisely refrained from calling upon his ace.

With Remy Kremer lasting less than an inning and the club showing a tissue paper attack, the Freebooters were almost pathetic as the erstwhile southpaw of the Quaker staff rode roughshod over them.

Mitchell, true to tell, did not have much more than enough speed to smash the isingglass in your front room stove, but Clarence used a spitball that completely befuddled the Buccos.

As a sort of an anti-climax, Paul Waner cracked out a homer with three on bases in the ninth inning, but even on top of this four-run homer, the Pirates were a few country miles behind the Birds. The score of the one-sided affair was 9 to 4.

Among those seeing the Pirates trimmed were more than 14,000 women and girls who had a great afternoon in the pleasant mid-summer sun. The management always has a Friday treat for the women folks and the Cardinals are extremely popular in the homes. Almost 8,000 other fans paid their way to see the spectacle.

It must have been annoying to the Pirates to experience eight long innings of run-less baseball at the

HAS RAPID RISE

A new riding hero is basking in the limelight these days. He is George Shreiner, an orphan lad of 17, who is under contract to Maxie Hirsch, the famous trainer. Attention became firmly focussed on the youth recently when he booted home four winners in one afternoon.

A year ago, George Shreiner came to Trainer Maxie Hirsch and asked him for a job. Now he is showing the way to the veteran jockeys and may become one of the greatest in history.

NEWEST JOCKEY STAR

JUNIOR TOURNAMENT DRAWS 350 LADS

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

WITH July 9, the date for the closing of entries, still 10 days off, the entry list for the first annual Sun-Telegraph West Penn amateur junior golf tournament for the William Randolph Hearst trophy and individual prizes, which is to be staged on the municipal links in Schenley Park, Thursday, July 12, has reached the 350 mark and is still climbing to the skies! The wave of enthusiasm shown by the younger golfers of the tri-state district in co-operating with this newspaper in endeavoring to uncover a second Bobby Jones is, indeed, far beyond even the most optimistic expectation. If the boys continue to enter as they have of the last week, it will be necessary to extend the 18-hole medal play event over a period of two days instead of one. There is no limit to the field, and there are only a few restrictions.

Those restrictions there are, however, must be adhered to to the letter. Any boy who misrepresents himself will be banned from the tournament immediately. The game of golf is a gentleman's game, and we expect all golfers among the juniors to conduct themselves accordingly.

There are two classes in the Sun-Telegraph's tourney. The Junior Class will be for boys between 15 and 18, and the Sub-Junior Class for boys 14 and under. All entrants must be amateurs as specified by the definition of the U. S. G. A., must be 18 years old or under, not attending a school of education higher than high school grades and cannot enter if they have accepted money for caddying after their sixteenth birthday.

Each boy must provide his own clubs and balls. There is no cost of any sort for entering the tournament or for playing in it. Beautiful prizes will be awarded. If you haven't entered already, enter now. And the Sun-Telegraph would like to have your picture, also. Here is a list of added entrants:

James McAlones, 14, 350 Connell ave., West View, Pa. (Sub-Junior).

Thomas McDonough, 15, 129 Denniston ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. (Sub-Junior).

Carl Russi, 15, 743 Fifth street, Oakmont, Pa. (Junior).

Robert Canname, 16, 7326 Church street, Swissvale, Pa. (Junior).

Auburn Thomas, 14, 826 Mervin ave., Sewickley, Pa. (Sub-Junior).

Andrew Murray, 14, 3430 Irvine st., Swissvale, Pa. (Sub-Junior).

Ed. D. Hrouse, 14, 142 Georgetown ave., West View, Pa. (Sub-Junior).

John Egan, 16, 1427 Bluff street, Pittsburgh, Pa. (Junior).

Michael Cronin, 15, 76 Marion street, Pittsburgh, Pa. (Junior).

Russell Kemper, 15, 1918 Erwin ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. (Junior).

W. H. R. Lewis, 18, 215 Ross street, Waynesburg, Pa. (Junior).

CHILLY SAUCE BY CHILLY DOYLE

Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, June 30.—The movements of eight other active Cardinals are closely watched by Walter Maranville as he plays the difficult short field role for the pace-setting Cardinals. Wattie Holm, under the influence of Bill McKechnie and Maranville, has blossomed into a star third baseman and one who is even more dangerous at the plate than Les Bell.

WHEN Rabbit tells Wattie to move away from or closer to the bag, the youngster takes the order. As a result he is learning the batters while spoiling base hits. McKechnie's slick outfield being largely experimental, Maranville places the pasture stars to a certain extent.

MESSRS. BREADON AND RICKEY are said to be wild in their delight over the doings of the former Pirate star. The Redbirds did not hit their great stride until Maranville and Jimmy Wilson became regulars. Two smart, fighting performers make a remarkable difference on any ball club.

HIS arms bare from the elbows down and his cap worn at any old angle, Sunny Jim Bottomely, a somewhat unconscious candidate for the valuable player prize, is all set for the summer drive. There are players who seemingly play for the "first and fifteenth of the month" (paydays), but Jim is out there eating up his share of dust without a financial worry of any kind.

FRANK FRISCH probably has player-prize aspirations, inasmuch as he never has been chosen for the honor. But the Fordham flash, valuable as he is, does not measure up to Bottomley's merit in the present phase of the race. Sunny Jim supplies the Dempsey wallop, without which the Redbirds would hardly be as potent.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

A MEMBER of the Illinois Athletic Commission is up in arms because the Mickey Walker-Ace Hudkins bout in Chicago recently drew a gate of approximately $125,000, yet saw the promoter, Jim Mullen, suffer a loss of $15,000 on his venture. He will make a move at the next meeting of the commission to limit the payment of purses to main bout principals to 50 per cent of the receipts. Walker was guaranteed $75,000 and Hudkins $25,000.

The plan of the Illinois mogul is a good one if it is enforced. New York has such a rule, but it is known that it has been ignored many times with impunity. Guaranteed purses for major bouts are the rule rather than the exception in New York City.

It is obviously ridiculous for the promoter to give the boxers such exorbitant purses that they risk ruin every time they stage a show. No boxer is worth more than he can draw, from the heavyweight champion on down the line. Neither is any show worth the fancy prices that are charged for seats to make such purses possible. Any promoter who does not realize these facts deserves to lose money on his attractions. And doubly so when he openly flouts the rule made to protect him.

THIS writer drew the name of Al Espinosa in an office pool on the national open golf tournament, and Espinosa finished among the also-rans. Three days later he cleaned up the stars of the same field in winning the Mid-American championship. Is there no justice in this world for a poor but honest sports scribe?

TENNIS LOOP RESUMES

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League will resume operations today after a fortnight's schedule break due to open dates reserved for the running-off of the Western Pennsylvania championships. This afternoon's regularly-carded milling will involve only outfits in the First Division. It is possible, however, that last minute arrangements will be completed for the playing of the South Hills-Westinghouse contest, postponed in the Second Division by reason of showers on June 9.

The upper section tilting promises a trio of torrid battles. Stanton Heights, with cap set for a determined titular bid, will entrain Howdve Campbell's College Hill forces from Beaver Falls. College Hill has thus far split better than even in the inter-club jousting and aims to give Capt. "Toots" Davis, Marion Rinehart and the rest of the scintillant Stantonians a real fight. On the P. A. A. courts, a temporary patched-up Winged Head crew will attempt conclusions with Don Mattern's likewise depleted University Club force. Capt. Dave O'Loughlin, his brother John, who several days ago annexed the West Penn trophy, and Jack Lauler—mainstays all of the Red and Gray—are out of the city, which means that Billy O'Loughlin and Wally Arensburg, hard-hitting Shady Side Academy lads, will probably be given opportunity to display their wares in the P. A. A. line-up. The Mattern contingent will be minus the services of Frank McClintock, crack number one man, who is away on a month's vacation, so that University Club will be quite as much handicapped as its opponent.

The third tussle of the day brings Mount Lebanon Moreland's Edgewood defenders to Westinghouse. If Edgewood can convoke its first-string combination, the home squad will have a tough session. If, on the other hand, Capt. Moreland is compelled to present a makeshift aggregation, Westinghouse should add another victory to its list. College Avenue will be idle.

DRIVERS AWAIT TESTS AT BRIDGEVILLE BOWL

What looms as one of the best automobile racing programs arranged in this section for a number of years will be presented at the famous Bridgeville speedway next Wednesday afternoon (Independence Day) when the Keystone Recreation Corporation sponsors its second meet of the year.

Eager to present the outstanding drivers in the country in the three events scheduled Wednesday, the officials in charge have spared no expense in arranging the entry list. While the list includes many of the old favorites, several newcomers will make their debut on Wednesday.

The qualifying trials will be held at the famous half-mile board track next Tuesday afternoon. With 21 drivers enrolled, the speed tests should be productive of furious competition. Only 12 drivers will qualify for the 50-mile event.

U. S. STAR DEFEATS BRITISH VETERAN

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30.—(AP.)—Helen Wills, American holder of the Wimbledon women's championship, reached the semi-finals today by vanquishing Mrs. M. Holcroft Watson, veteran British tournament star, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-0.

In beating Mrs. Watson, the American ace repeated her triumph of two weeks ago in the Wightman Cup matches, allowing her opponent exactly the same number of games today as she did then. After meeting spirited opposition in the first set, Miss Wills made short work of her rival in the last.

British tennis followers had noped that Mrs. Watson, one of the steadiest baseliners in the country, would extend Miss Wills and perhaps even take a set, but this hope was quickly dissipated after the first set.

After dropping what seems to be her usual quota of three "courtesy" games to an opponent Miss Wills won easily, outclassing Mrs. Watson in every department of play. The English woman was able to deuce only one game in the last set, so complete was she put on the defensive by the American's hard and accurate driving.

SPORT COMMENT

braska at Lincoln and Carnegie Tech playing Notre Dame at South Bend, Holohan saw a chance to give the local fans a game and at the same time attract some attention to the Dukes.

THE Bluffites were booked to meet Thiel at Greenville, but arrangements have been made whereby the game will be shifted to this city and played at either Pitt Stadium or Forbes Field.

How's that for progress? Not only are the Dukes likely to take great strides forward in a playing sense now that Coach Elmer Layden has made out in a year on his team building process, but they are going to be advanced through the efforts of a live-wire business management, as well.

A FAMILIAR figure in a new role greets the eyes of Pittsburghers in business circles these days. Karl E. Davis, for years graduate manager of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh, and who made such a remarkable record in that office that he became recognized everywhere as one of the country's leaders in college sports and one of the most capable managers in the land, has passed the state examination and obtained the necessary license at Harrisburg to become a salesman of bonds. He is attached to a downtown firm of bond brokers.

Karl E. Davis

Karl has got off to a flying start in his new game and is making the same progress that marked the early part of his career as Pitt manager. Perhaps he will not be allowed to sell bonds always, unless he desires to do so, for many college sport followers have a hunch that he will be needed so urgently in college athletics that he will one day be requested to return.

REMY KREMER has company in his distress. Charley Root, slab ace of the Cubs, has lost six games in a row.

EDDIE MULLIGAN'S world's record in pinch-hitting was halted yesterday. After hitting safely in five straight trips to the plate as a pinch-hitter, a performance without an equal, his string was broken when he batted for Dawson in the ninth inning yesterday and fouled to Wilson.

BILL CARRIGAN SUSPENDED

BOSTON, June 30.—(AP.)—President E. S. Barnard of the American League yesterday notified Manager Bill Carrigan of the Boston Redsox that he had been suspended for three days as a result of an episode in the second game of Thursday's double-header with Washington here. Carrigan disputed a decision at first base, and was banished from the field by Umpire Ormsby.

CHICAGO, June 30.—(AP.)—President E. S. Barnard, of the American League yesterday disallowed Washington's protest of Boston's victory in the first game of their double-header Wednesday.

MATMAN BEATS HIMSELF

BOSTON, June 30.—(AP.)—Gus Sonnenberg, former Dartmouth football star and victor in 40 consecutive heavyweight wrestling matches, was unconscious in a hospital today with concussion of the brain as the aftermath of a sensational bout last night with Ed (Strangler) Lewis, in which the Strangler came within a fraction of forfeiting his title.

Sonnenberg won the first fall. Then the former collegian attempted to negotiate a second flying tackle hold on the champion. Lewis sidestepped and Sonnenberg literally flew through the ropes to land on his head beyond the row of newspapermen.

When in 15 minutes he was unable to continue, Lewis was awarded the match.

Lewis resorted to his famous strangleholds without avail. Before the first fall Sonnenberg dived in to butt Lewis in the stomach. Then he lifted the champion from his feet with the flying tackle and slammed the Strangler's huge bulk to the mat to take the first fall in 37 minutes and 30 seconds. The champion was out for five minutes.

hands of the easy throwing Mitchell. Meantime, the Redbirds were pecking away at Kremer and Joe Dawson in such an effective manner that the contest was not in doubt as it reached the closing stages.

The Cards serenaded Kremer with two doubles, two singles and a sacrifice fly in the opening round. Sandwiched in was a hectic throw by Peter Scott which helped in the general confustion of the Pittsburghers. Kremer came out in favor of Dawson while the cannonading was in progress.

Joe tried to carry on, but the home warriors were not to be denied. And to further mix up the scene for the Buccos, Sprout Waner had a hard time getting his hands on two balls that went for extra base hits. On the whole, the Pirates did not perform like a championship club.

Rush was rather disappointed with the punch of his club on the previous day, so when McKechnie sent out another southpaw, Donie yanked Grantham from the lineup. Pete Scott going into action. Pete went to right field, Paul Waner coming into first.

The belated attack of the Pirates did not seem to stir the Cards to any extent. Entering the ninth inning with a deficit of nine tallies, Brother Paul's cleanup homer caused a ripple in the stands and then the Pirates-Cardinals ended the contest on the next two batters. It was another sad tale, mates.

Shipping About to Revive. When to Purchase Stocks.

By B. C. FORBES

YOU will soon see the American flag back on the ocean in respectable numbers. My shipping friends tell me that the United States Shipping Board is co-operating heartily with them to give the nation the advantages authorized by Congress before it adjourned.

Shipowning is to be encouraged by the payment of attractive rates for carrying American mails, by the lending of governmental funds at low rates to stimulate the building of new ships and by other helpful, sympathetic measures. I am told that the response by American shipowners has gratified the Washington shipping authorities and that really important expansion of American shipping and shipbuilding has been definitely programmed.

This news should interest and cheer everyone—except foreign competitors.

THE worse stock prices fall, the more attractive the stocks become in the eyes of those who understand economics. But the novice takes exactly the opposite view. The higher quotations go, the more eager he is to buy. When the bottom tumbles out of the market and good stocks can be purchased at genuine bargain prices, the novice becomes frightened and would not dream of buying a single share. "Buy cheap and sell dear" is accepted as a hard-headed business axiom in all lines, except stocks. Outsiders love to buy dear—and then often find themselves compelled to sell cheap. That is actually what has happened lately to many thousands of misguided individuals.

Most stocks are really a better purchase today than they were when the market was booming gaily and when purchases were exceeding four million shares a day. But since stocks became cheaper, the demand has dried up and we have had the smallest trading since the beginning of last year.

THIS writer regards good stocks as less unattractive than they were when the public were tumbling over themselves to buy them, but he is inclined to think that most issues probably will be purchaseable at lower prices, if patience is exercised.

For the long pull—but not the short pull—well selected oils would seem to contain possibilities—also numbers of utility issues. Some motor stocks are likely to rise substantially, others to sink.

A READER, Arthur Maher, in a letter commending what was said in this column the other day about the advisability of taking vacations, encloses the following from his scrap book:

EGO

If your nose is close
To the grind stone rough,
And you hold it down
There long enough,
In time you'll say
There's no such things
As brooks that babble
And birds that sing.
These three will all
Your world compose;
Just you, the stone
And your darned old nose.

MANY of hotse attending the Democratic convention will get a better idea of the progress made by Texas and the South than they had before. Houston is an excellent example of the type of city now dotting the New South. Another Texas city which has started to tell the world what it has become and what it is rapidly on the way to become is Dallas. Instead of confining its national advertising to the city, the Dallas Chamber of Commerce is disseminating information about the whole of the Southwest.

"Dallas has been built into a great metropolis with the help of this territory," declares R. L. Thornton, president of Industrial Dallas, Inc., "and Dallas sees in the campaign an opportunity to repay in part the debt. The destiny of Dallas is inseparably linked with the destiny of this territory, with its six billions of purchasing power, and its twelve millions of people."

This breadth of view is commended to other progressive cities.

A NEW YORK business man who has returned from a trip over the continent remarked:

"I was amazed to find more people talking about Hoover than about Smith. I had foolishly imagined that Governor Smith was as much of a figure everywhere else as he is in New York. Before I left I had assumed that Al would win rather easily. I have changed that opinion."

Wall Street likes Governor Smith and is lukewarm towards Hoover, but at that it lays odds that Hoover will win. However, Wall Street can and often does change its mind very quickly.

FIRM TONE IN FUEL STOCKS

Trading was fairly active during the short week-end session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, but price fluctuations were narrow in the general list.

Dealings in Armstrong Cork were in larger volume, due to reports that the company had won an important court decision bearing on the company's patents for the manufacture of embossed linoleum. Settlement of this litigation in favor of Armstrong will open the way to increased revenue through royalties for one thing, and will strengthen the company's position in the production and marketing of the embossed linoleum, the demand for and use of which is constantly increasing.

The fuel stocks were firm, and prices in this section showed fractional advances over yesterday's closings. Business was not concentrated in any particular issues, although the Arkansas Gas stocks reflected more interest on the buying side than had been evident earlier in the week.

Miscellaneous industrials were steady, with nothing of special interest transpiring during the two hours of business. Standard Sanitary dipped under 37, but not much stock was for sale, while Zoller common changed hands at 50, equal to the last previous price, several days ago.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, June 30.—Further unwelcome rains in the harvest region Southwest, together with unshocked for upturns in Liverpool quotations, gave an early lift today to wheat values here. Corn, meanwhile, underwent a sharp setback as a result of better weather and likelihood of enlarged receipts. Opening unchanged to 1¼c up, Chicago wheat later showed some advance all around. Corn started at ⅝c decline to ⅛c gain and then tumbled. Oats were easy. Provisions displayed weakness.

Kansas dispatches today telling of additional rainfalls during harvest said that at some points the total moisture precipitation in the last months had been more than 2½ times the yearly average. It was also asserted that even with sunshine four or five days must elapse before farmers could get into the fields.

Official reports of black rust in Northwest Kansas counties were received, but had comparatively little influence. As a rule no important damage from this cause was expected. Serious results from black rust was being confined generally to spring wheat, whereas the bulk of Kansas crop is of the hard winter variety.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

NEWS AND VIEWS

Exchange Seats Lower.

Sale of a New York Stock Exchange membership has been arranged for $326,000, a drop of $15,000 from the preceding transaction.

Screw & Bolt Retires Bonds.

Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt has retired $150,000 of 5½ per cent sinking fund gold debenture bonds through the operation of the sinking fund. The company last year purchased $820,000 par value of the bonds in the open market, which are being held in the treasury. No action has been taken so far this year toward open market purchases. The original issue was $5,000,000.

Oil Share Trust Formed.

Organization of the Petroleum Bond and Share Corporation, incorporated under the laws of Delaware, with an authorized capitalization of $2,000,000, consisting of 20,000 shares $7 cumulative preferred stock, and 30,000 shares of no nominal stock, both without par value, has been announced. The new corporation will be engaged in investing in and facilitating the financing of companies engaged in or affiliated with the oil industry. John M. Loveley, formerly vice president of the Amerada Petroleum Corporation, has been elected president of the new company. The directors are: Mathew C. Brush, president, American International Corporation; W. A. Harriman, chairman of board, W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc.; William Lovejoy, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Joseph F. Uhlein, chairman of the Second Ward Savings Bank, Milwaukee; G. H. Walker, president of W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc., and Cornelius F. Kelley, president of Anaconda Copper Mining Company.

Auto Pace Slackening.

Seasonal slackening in the automotive industry at Toledo started this week, when 31 major plants dropped 235 workers, leaving a total of 41,244 against 25,492 a year ago. Capacity production in those plants, however, continued five weeks later this year than in 1927.

Tidewater Buys Oil Company.

Tidewater-Associated Oil Company of California has acquired Westco Oil Company of Spokane, which distributes oil and gasoline to approximately 120 independent service stations.

Linseed Merger Delayed.

The projected merger of American Linseed Company and the Gold Dust Corporation is expected to be delayed for awhile. The right of the preferred, in those plants, to accumulated dividends is in question, and the two groups interested have not yet been able to agree on terms.

More Gold to France.

About $28,000,000 more gold from the $100,000,000 recently "earmarked" here by the Bank of France is scheduled to leave New York over the week-end, increasing to about $257,000,000 total shipments to France since last September. French purchases of gold in this country since September, including exports and earmarkings, are figured at $315,000,000. The New York Federal Reserve Bank in its monthly review reports the gold supply in the United States decreased $52,000,000 in June and about $500,000,000 since last August, when the outward movement began.

Newmont Official Denies Report.

An official of Newmont Mining Company declares the statement purported to have been given out by the treasurer of United Verde Extension Mining Company that Newmont had decided not to exercise its option to purchase United Verde properties is erroneous, and that the option has not been relinquished.

Car and Foundry Profits Down.

American Car and Foundry Company reports for the year ended April 30, consolidated net income of $3,754,555 after charges and reserves equal after preferred dividends to $2.76 on 600,000 common shares against $4,593,377, or $4.15 a share in the year preceding. Deficit after dividends was $1,965,445 as against deficit of $1,106,623 a year ago.

Belgian Bank Rate Reduced.

The Bank of Belgium has reduced its discount rate to 4 per cent from 4½ per cent, which had been in effect since November 16, 1927.

American Fruit Growers.

American Fruit Growers, Inc., shows earnings for the first five months of 1928 amounted to $802,292, from which a provision for federal taxes payable in 1929 of $98,504 has been deducted, leaving a net increase in surplus for the five months of $703,788, after deducting charges for depreciation and taxes. This compares with a total increase in surplus account of $679,106 for the entire year 1927.

Weirton Steel Still at 100 Per Cent.

The Weirton Steel Company has been operating its open-hearth department at Weirton, W. Va., on a 100 per cent basis since the second week in January. It has 11 open hearths on now and has started construction of No. 12, which is expected to be running by the end of the year.

Cotton Market Strong.

Early advances of about 75 cent to $1 a bale were made in the New York cotton market on the strength in Liverpool and a crop report by a prominent spot house, placing the condition at 66.9 and the crop, on the basis of 6 per cent increase in acreage, at 14,300,000 bales. Showers continued in the eastern belt and the forecast was for unsettled weather, but the active started profit taking as well as local selling. Liverpool was also a seller. The market was a little steadier, however, after early selling on support from commission houses and spot sources.

United States Orders Air Engines.

Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Company has been given an order for 72 hornet engines and parts by the secretary of war. The Pratt and Whitney Company is controlled by the Niles, Bement, Pond Company.

Associated Gas Net Rises.

The Associated Gas and Electric System reports net income of $6,257,795 for the 12 months ended April 30, 1928, after interest, depreciation, etc., against $4,494,064 in the year preceding.

Seasonal Recession Mild.

Although some recent slackening in the general rate of business activity in the Philadelphia Federal Reserve district has occurred, said the monthly statement issued by the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank, there are many indications that this seasonal recession has been somewhat less pronounced than usual. "Despite the fact that a seasonal decline usually occurs at this time," the statement said, "factory employment and payrolls both continued more than 7 per cent under 1927 levels. Industrial consumption of electric power in this district increased more than 2 per cent in May as compared with April."

Firm Suggests Profit Taking.

Hornblower & Weeks say: "We would take profits quite generally in the stocks which have had substantial advances in the past three days. To our way of thinking the pace of recovery is being undertaken at too rapid a rate, and while we maintain that subsequent reactions in the market during July will not bring the average down to lower levels this month, nevertheless a sagging market could readily take the place of the present rapid advance and profits could be prolonged for a sufficient length of time to return somewhat to the pessimistic views of 10 days ago. Such a development will be in keeping the sequence of speculative movements, following the type of the May-June reaction."

Democratic Tariff Plank.

"The tariff plank in the Democratic platform virtually removes the traditional point of cleavage between the two great parties," says Merrylie Stanley Rukeyser, business expert of the Universal Service. "For years, the older Democratic doctrine that there should be a tariff for revenue only has been modified. The change in Democratic views toward the tariff is not an accident. The agricultural South, which was the stronghold of the free trade doctrine for generations, has in recent years become industrialized. The setting up of factories in the South has been remaking the political map of the country. Conversely, the emergence of America as the leading creditor nation in the world, has induced some of the international bankers, who were formerly protectionists, to favor a letdown of tariff barriers in order to encourage debtors to pay back their obligations in goods."

Northern Pacific Surplus Up.

Surplus of the Northern Pacific for five months this year after fixed charges, moved up to $4,035,000, equal to $1.62 a share from $2,087,000 or $4 cents a share in the same period of 1927. Howard Elliott, chairman, said June gross revenues were running slightly ahead of a year ago and he expected an increase for the month. He was uncertain whether June net operating income would be larger than June, 1927, owing to increased payrolls and larger maintenance program. The crop outlook in the road's territory as whole, was fair, although the wheat crop west of the Rockies was less than last year and he thought the spring wheat crop would be smaller.

June Failures Fewer.

R. G. Dun & Co. reports 1,950 commercial failures in June with indebtedness of $27,974,000, against 2,008 in May with liabilities of $36,118,990. Failures for the week were 422, a decrease of 24 from the week before, and one less than a year ago.

New York Clearing House.

NEW YORK, June 30.—(INS.)—Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $1,482,000,000; balances, $128,000,000; Federal Reserve Bank's credit balance, $117,000,000.

NOTICE is hereby given that ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on April 2, 1928, pursuant to the provisions of the several acts of Assembly authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys, or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL No. 1069.

An Ordinance vacating Lynda way, from Second avenue to Gate Lodge way, in the 15th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Lynda way, from Second avenue to Gate Lodge way, in the 15th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, as laid out in the revised plan of "Espey Place Plan of Lots," recorded in the Recorder's Office of Allegheny County, in Plan Book, Vol. 17, page 94, shall be and the same is hereby vacated.

SECTION 2. That any ordinance or part of ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that ordinance, copy of which is published herewith, was introduced in Council of the City of Pittsburgh on June 25, 1928, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys, or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1985.

AN ORDINANCE — Authorizing and directing the grading, paving and curbing of Edgerton street, from Linden avenue 174.40 feet eastwardly to the west line of the Clover-Crest Plan; letting a contract therefor, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses of the same be assessed against and collected from property specially benefited thereby.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Edgerton street, from Linden avenue 174.40 feet eastwardly to the west line of the Clover-Crest Plan, be graded, paved and curbed.

SECTION 2. The Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Works are hereby authorized and directed to advertise, in accordance with the acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the Ordinances of the said City of Pittsburgh relating thereto and regulating the same, for proposals for the grading, paving and curbing of said street between said points; the contract or contracts therefor to be let in the manner directed by the said Acts of Assembly and Ordinances; and the contract price or contract prices, if let in separate contracts, not to exceed the total sum of Three Thousand Five Hundred ($3,500.00) Dollars, which is the estimate of the whole costs as furnished by the Department of Public Works.

SECTION 3. The costs, damages and expenses of the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties specially benefited thereby, in accordance with the provisions of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same, and the City's share of said work to be chargeable to and payable from Code Account, People's Bond Issue, 1928.

NOTICE is hereby given that ordinances, copies of which are published herewith, were introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on June 11, 1928, pursuant to the provisions of the several acts of Assembly authorizing said City, without any petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys, or parts thereof, within the limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1852.

Section 2. The Department of Public Works is hereby authorized and directed to cause said Forward avenue in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Wards of the City of Pittsburgh, at its intersection with Saline street, to be widened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this ordinance.

Section 3. The costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby and the benefits to pay the same, shall be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby in accordance with the provisions of the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same.

Section 4. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

BILL NO. 1860.

AN ORDINANCE widening Emily street, in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Craft avenue to Halket street, changing the name thereof to "The Boulevard of the Allies" and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby.

Section 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Emily street, in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Craft avenue to Halket street, be and the same is hereby widened to a variable width by taking for public use for highway purposes all of the following described property, to-wit:

Beginning at the intersection of the easterly line of Craft avenue and the present southerly line of Emily street; thence extending north 88° 05' 15" east 810.63 feet along the present southerly line of Emily street to a point of curve in the same; thence in an easterly and southerly direction along the same by the arc of a circle deflecting to the right with a radius of 100.0 feet and a central angle of 51° 53' 00" for a distance of 90.55 feet to a point of tangent at the westerly line of Halket street; thence south 40° 01' 45" east 71.56 feet along the westerly line of Halket street to a point; thence north 50° 41' 05" west 31.84 feet to a point of curve; thence in a northerly and westerly direction by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 200.0 feet and a central angle of 41° 13' 40" for a distance of 143.91 feet to a point of tangent; thence south 88° 05' 15" west 734.30 feet along a line parallel to and at a perpendicular distance of 24.0 feet south of the present southerly line of Emily street to a point of curve; thence in a westerly and southerly direction by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 10.0 feet and a central angle of 131° 28' 45" for a distance of 22.95 feet to a point of tangent on the easterly line of Craft avenue; thence north 43° 23' 30" west 54.22 feet along the easterly line of Craft avenue to the place of beginning.

Section 2. The name of Emily street in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Craft avenue to Halket street, as widened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this ordinance, shall be and the same is hereby changed to "The Boulevard of the Allies."

Section 3. The Department of Public Works is hereby authorized and directed to cause said Emily street, re-named as "The Boulevard of the Allies," in the Fourth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Craft avenue to Halket street, to be widened in conformity with the provisions of Section 1 of this ordinance.

Section 4. The costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby and the benefits to pay the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby in accordance with the Acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same.

Section 5. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

From out my chiffoniers;
I searched the household o'er,
The while I softly swore,

There's not a corner missed,
Nor cobweb left unkissed,
I did the kidney twist,
In my mad ex-plor-a-tion;
Then wifie says, "You squirt,

It's in your dirty shirt
And not your chiffoniers."

Lang Properly Demands Money's Worth for City

The declaration of Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, that dismissal confronts the inspector who does not see that contractors fulfill their obligation to the city in every respect has a ring that strikes a responsive note with the public. Director Lang, in announcing the issuance of his order, stated it was not caused by any revelation of neglect on the part of inspectors recently, but by the determination of his department to get a dollar's worth of improvements for every dollar spent.

There is no work more important to the city in a financial way than that of the inspector of construction. He stands between the municipality and the agency employed and his neglect may cost thousands, while strict adherence to his duties may save thousands for either party to the contract. Contractors are benefited if they are made to do work properly. It is cheaper to do it right first than it is to be called upon perhaps several months later to remedy a defect that has been covered up.

The city has had costly experience in some construction, notably in the Bigelow boulevard retaining wall, so it is not without good reason that Director Lang issues his drastic order. He looks for his inspectors to see that the specifications of the city's engineers are fully carried out, so there may be no more talk about "botch" jobs.

Uncle Sam's Pop Gun

A Foolish Waste of Money.

ONE OF OUR BIG 16-IN. COAST DEFENSE GUNS—USELESS.

The first automobiles had a "dashboard," the kind that was on every buggy, and family carriage, drawn by a horse. The horse kicked up mud as he went. The dashboard kept the mud from hitting the driver.

HABITS STICK TO US, so when we built automobiles, with no horse in front to kick up mud, we put dashboards on the automobiles anyhow. Later men knew enough to put mud guards on the automobile wheels. The wheels being the mud throwers instead of the horse's feet.

What we did with our dashboard on automobiles, this Government is doing with cannon like the one you see here.

Such cannon were put along the coast to protect us in days when attack would have come on the SURFACE from battleships. In those days, if this country had been attacked, which is practically unthinkable, ships would have come over the ocean, with heavy guns and soldiers.

They would have bombarded our forts and cities along the coast. The soldiers would have landed and would have attempted to conquer us.

But, as Napoleon, greatest military genius since Caesar, was never able to cross the narrow English Channel, less than 30 miles wide, and land soldiers on British soil, you can imagine what sort of a time Europe would have had sending soldiers across the Atlantic Ocean, 2,000 miles, to conquer us from the edge of the coast and then KEEP US CONQUERED.

When that was the plan of war these coast defense guns were reasonable, the right thing.

But everybody knows that hereafter there never will be an attack on the United States in floating SHIPS. No European or Asiatic nation would be insane enough to send men over and try to land them on our coast to march against our cities. No nation will waste time sending over ships to bombard cities with ordinary cannon balls.

ANY ATTACK WILL COME THROUGH THE AIR.

This cannon carries a shell that weighs 2,000 pounds and might sink a ship.

The flying enemy attacking our cities would carry bombs filled with TNT and deadly gasses, of which half a dozen could kill hundreds of thousands of people and put a city out of commission.

Those whom we call "statesmen" should get their minds off the old "dashboard" war period and bring themselves UP TO DATE.

They should stop spending public money on ridiculous popguns scattered along the shore, toys that will never again be used in national defense.

If we are attacked, it will be by airships sailing across the ocean, when flying aircraft is a little more developed.

THAT ATTACK COULD COME TODAY by huge freight steamers bringing aircraft knocked down or mounted on airplane carriers. Those enemy ships bringing attacking airplanes would not come within reach of the gun in this picture, biggest coast defense guns can reach out to sea only a few twenty or thiry miles at most.

Airplane carriers from abroad would anchor off our coast, out of sight of land, a hundred miles or more. There, in safety, protected against attack by naval convoy, the airplanes would be launched. An hour later they would be attacking our cities, wiping out masses of population, destroying gigantic sums in property. And if they found us unprepared, a few hours would find the cities surrendering at the mercy of the invader.

No courage, no determination could hold out against poison gas that kills everything it touches, horrible explosives that could shatter a city.

Airplanes in sufficient numbers COULD protect us—nothing else could. This nation should have the greatest and swiftest air fleet in the world, and the greatest submarine fleet to destroy airplane carriers.

This "dashboard" pop-gun, on which the country spends its money, is one great proof of human stupidity and lack of imagination.

THE WARNING BEACON

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

THE slightly antiquated wisecrack that liquor "just off the boat" is scraped off the sides seems to have justification. Whatever it is, the results grow increasingly mystifying. The headline: "In Bed With Boots On In Strange Room," or a variant, is a daily chronicle.

Chemists say the ether which is the walloping motif of bootleg beverage is responsible for the peculiar carrying-on of drinkers. It provides a quick and jolting glow and a short while after the victims "draw a blank."

Last night—and this is not even slightly exaggerated—a sedate looking gentleman accompanied two ladies into a cafe a few steps from Madison avenue. He had a courtly dignity, but a half hour later was walking across the floor on all fours, barking like a dog.

That was surprising enough, but not as surprising as the head waiter's statement he often did that when sparked up. One of the big hotels had a little drama at its entrance the other forenoon. A lady teetered from a taxicab at the curb with an alcoholic giggle.

Then she began playing tab with herself in a revolving door. She spun around madly until a misstep catapulted her across the marble foyer like a ball player sliding for third. When assisted to her feet she added another comic touch by walking gravely backward to the elevator, throwing kisses.

Liquor no longer creates a mere unsteady step and thick tongue. Those indulging want to do a head spin or some flip-flop heretofore reserved for the Bounding McGuires or the Flying Nabbs of vaudeville. And lung testing is combined with acrobatics.

On Park avenue at 3 a. m. an entire block was stirred out of sleep by a young blade who quitted a party and decided the neighborhood was entirely too lifeless. He began to scream "Robbers" and was still screaming it when he was tucked in a cell at a police station. He said he just couldn't stop.

A professional dance team recently split. The lady insisted there was no pique, but when pressed admitted her partner would not listen to her plea to stop eating onions for dinner. That would be something like attending a block party in Little Italy every night.

* * *

One of the trick subtleties of performers in obscure attractions is to list themselves on the program in this manner: "Miss Dotty La Ver—She once sang for Ziegfeld." And it will develop she has—in the back row of a chorus.

* * *

A curious theatrical personage crossed the reportorial horizon the other day. For 25 years he has been taking the role of either the hind or foremost part of a stage horse, appearing in every sort of production from the Weberfieldian extravaganza to continuous vaudeville. Curiously enough he resembled those middle aged idols of old stock company days. He has never been out of employment more than a month at a time and has averaged $50 a week. No audience ever gazed on his face. I was eager to know how a person made such a hum-drum job a life work. He had been a stage hand and one time was called upon to act as a part of a horse. He kept at it, just as they do in the success stories.

Many excellent actors have been recruited from theatrical stage hands. The formula is always the same. They take a line part from time to time, become stage struck and Voila! Their opportunity to study stage technique has advanced many of them rapidly.

* * *

Orchestra leaders, especially in vaudeville houses, have to have some histrionic ability these days. They are called upon to engage in cross-fire talk, become the butt of low comedy wheezes, grow flirtatious with ingenues and such. The Palace would scarcely be the same unless Ben Roberts, the orchestra leader, was dragged into a skit or two. Ben has become a finished actor.

* * *

"It must be wonderful," writes a Savannah, Ga., lady, "to be a New York columnist and meet all those interesting people." For instance?

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Paths of the Planets

"I take great interest in your articles on astronomy, and I wish to ask you to explain why the planets revolve in elliptic orbits instead of circular ones. I can see no possible reason for their doing so, but I see that you often mention it as if it was the perfectly logical thing for them to do.—A. J. W., Poughkeepsie, N. Y."

AND so it is perfectly "logical" for the planets to travel in ellipses, perfect logic being perfect mechanics and mathematics. You may not know that a circle is only a particular form of the closed curve called the ellipse. It is just as easy for a planet to travel in one form of ellipse as in another; all depends upon the circumstances of the case. It would have to be a very "precise" case, indeed, to induce a planet to travel around the sun in a circle. There is no such case known in the solar system.

In order that such a thing should happen it would be necessary for the planet to start its career in a direction precisely at right angles to a line joining it to the sun and with a velocity precisely equal to that imparted by the sun's attraction at that point. Then, if there were no interference from the attraction of other bodies, the planet would travel in a circle, having the sun exactly at its center, and its velocity would be always precisely the same. If you want this in a mathematical shape the following formula covers the ground:

$$F = \frac{V}{R}$$

This puts into words (which the mathematician never does, preferring his own very compact language of figures and signs) means that F, the force by which the planet is moved, equals the square of its velocity, V, divided by R, the distance from the sun.

But if the original motion of the planet was not directed at a right angle to the sun, and if its velocity was either greater or less than that necessary precisely to equal the sun's gravitative force at the distance at which the history of the planet began, then it would travel in another form of ellipse than the precise form called a circle, and the sun, instead of being exactly at the center of the curve, would be a certain distance to one side of the center, in one of the two foci of the ellipse. Then, too, the speed of the planet would be variable—greatest when the curve of the ellipse brought it nearest to the sun and least when the curve carried it farthest from the sun.

Ellipses may be of any degree of eccentricity, i. e., of variation from a circle, but in fact the ellipses pursued by the planets are not very eccentric, so that when we draw them on a small scale they look like circles. No two planets have elliptical orbits of exactly the same degree of eccentricity. In the case of the earth the eccentricity is such that we are about three million miles nearer the sun in winter (of the Northern Hemisphere) than in summer; but the average distance is about 93,000,000 miles.

To sum up in a sentence about the shape of the planets' orbits, we may put it this way: There must be an accord between the attractive force, the initial direction of motion, and the velocity in the orbit. Such an accord may exist just as well when the motion is not in a circle as when it is in a circle, provided that the velocity does not exceed a certain amount, viz., the square root of two times what it would be if the motion were in a circle. In cases of such excess the planet would cease to revolve in a closed orbit and pass away into space, beyond the power of the sun to bring it back.

Underpaid

A DEBATE could be staged on Countess Asquith's assertion that the Prime Minister of Great Britain during his term of office is "more of a power than any President."

He has one advantage over our President, in that the law-making body is always behind him, else he would not remain Prime Minister. Except for this, the power of the Presidency is probably greater.

But upon the question of pay the Countess has the whole of the argument. A net of $20,000 a year is ridiculously too little for the administrative head of the British Empire. It scarcely amounts to vest pocket change.

Herbert Asquith could have earned 10 times that income at the bar. That he died a poor man is a tribute to his devotion to public duty. Minds able to grapple with world affairs should not have to be fretted by problems of petty personal economy.

Learn Art of Self-Control

HAVE you control of your temper?

Or is it easy for you to fly in a rage, your greatest desire being to pitch bodily into the person who has roused you?

When you believe that you have been wronged, when your boss has censured you, is your first thought that you would like to give him a beating?

If these conditions are often yours it is more than likely that you are unwilling to discuss any point when you are angry.

All you think about is fight.

And then you wonder why you have not made greater progress where you are employed.

Stop to think things over, occasionally, and you will bring to mind many times when you have lost your temper.

Positions of trust are not put in the hands of persons who do not control their emotions.

An executive must remain cool in order to think clearly.

The one who angers easily is at a decided disadvantage against the one who is master of self at all times.

Why allow little things to have such power over you?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

The Best of Him

MEN loved him greatly, for they know
The best of him was good and true,
Incapable of any wrong
And happy as the robin's song.

And yet, despite their faith and trust,
The best of him was stained with rust,
A sword unused; it was a light
Too shaded to defy the night.

Only sometimes a gleam, a spark
Revealed that presence through the dark . . . .
Had he but willed it so, his best
Could have illumined all the rest.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

YOU can't always tell when you're disturbing the skeletons in other folks' closets. You ask questions, and maybe they ain't so innocent as you think.

There was a woman, and her husband was always talking about his diet and his stomach, so the friends of the family that knew them always inquired after husband's stomach.

Mrs. Rash says to Mrs. Quiet, "How's your husband's stomach now? I ain't seen him about for a long time."

"Why, his stomach ain't so good. No, he ain't about much."

"Can he eat anything he wants to now?"

"Oh, dear no! Very restricted."

"Does he get enough exercise?"

"Hardly any."

"Well, the poor man! Did the doctor forbid him to go out?"

"Not the doctor, no. The judge, though, thought he'd better stay in."

"Gone to a judge about it, has he? Well, what does the judge say is the matter with him, and what is he going to do about it?"

"Why, if you must know, the judge pronounces it forgery, and six months is the least he can hope for. Now would you mind trotting off and minding your own business?"

Simple

FLANNIGAN and Hannigan were in a dilemma— in fact, they were in a regular Irish stew.

"Shure," exclaimed Flannigan, "these scales is no good at all, at all! They only weigh up to 200 pounds, and Oi'm near to 250!"

They put their heads together and considered the matter.

"Av course," reflected Hannigan, "we must cut some av the superfluous off ye, till ye balance."

But Flannigan objected.

Then Hannigan was struck by a sudden inspiration. "Shure," he exclaimed, "phwat's to prevent ye gettin' on twice?"

Unkind

THE man and the girl were sitting out at a dance, and for some time there had been silence between them.

"Do you know," he said at last, "that every evening, before I go to bed, I write down my thoughts in my diary! Interesting, don't you think?"

"Oh, most," she answered. "How long have you been doing it?"

"About a couple of years," was the reply.

"Indeed!" said the girl, sweetly. "Then you must have the first page nearly full."

Lost the Lift

THE solicitor, whose office was on the fifth floor, was expecting a client from the country. Suddenly the door opened and a man staggered in, puffing violently.

"What a climb up those stairs!" he gasped.

"Why didn't you take the lift?" asked the solicitor.

"I meant to," explained the man from the country, "but I just missed the thing."

Isn't It So?

Some men take a roundabout way to square themselves.

If you are going to forgive and forget, don't forget to do your forgiving first.

These days, when a girl says she has nothing to wear she speaks the literal truth.

Few men care for warmed-over things, especially when it's love that grows cold.

Many a man ultimately gets in the swim only to realize that he is beyond his depths.

When a man complains that he is unable to collect his thoughts, it may be because there are none coming to him.

"IT"

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Elinor Glyn is responsible for the name "It." It is a term for personality. It is that individual something about a person or a thing that makes it attractive.

Did you ever ask what you know about a man? You could not tell the color of his eyes or hair, nor what kind of clothes he wears, but you would know him if you saw him turning the corner two blocks away. It is the indefinable "It" about him that you recognize.

If the odor of a rose were absent or the flavor of an apple, the difference in weight could not be detected by the most sensitive scales. Yet it is the flavor of the apple and the odor of the rose that give these two things characteristics.

A composite of the "success advice" given by successful men would be one long string of contradictions.

One advises you to keep out of debt; another to get in debt.

One says get married early; another not to burden yourself with a family until you are sure of your future.

One says to follow the plan of "taking others with you;" another to "steer your ship alone."

And so on, ad infinitum.

Such contradictory advice is given by "good men all," who have succeeded themselves and ought to know what they are talking about, and who honestly think they are imparting the reasons for their own personal success.

The moral is: It all depends.

The truth is: They don't know.

The reason it is so hard for one who has succeeded himself to tell others about the secret of that success lies in the importance of the unknown quality.

Just why John Barrymore is better than a dozen other actors, or why Pavlova stands out from the other finished dancers of the day, they themselves could not fully explain.

If they tried they would probably give rules which others have followed—perhaps more conscientiously—without arriving at the top rung.

The subtle, eluding difference is all-important.

It defies analysis. It is the X quantity of the problem.

But it often marks the difference between success and failure.

Grapes transplanted from the vineyards of France to other lands are said to flourish and bear abundantly. But the fruit never has the same flavor.

The grapes look the same. They smell the same. They are just as big and as brilliantly colored. But something is lacking. An unknown quality of the soil contributes their superior taste. Similarly, in people an intangible something, the flash of personality, the fire of magnetism, or some other quality that refuses to be catalogued, is the thing that puts them above competitors who have as many, or more, logical qualifications for success.

In reading the secrets to which great men attribute their achievements, it is well to make the mental addition of: "Plus the unknown Quality."

Right Angles

By ALEXANDER CAIRNS

They Hanged Him

WHEN one squints across the fence post of a decade, progress seems to have about the speed of a comnambulistic snail. Evolution seems leaden footed and laggard stepping.

But use a century instead of a decade for your sighting upright and Father Time must use two stop watches to catch the celerity; and some half dozen watches if the century be the one that closed yesterday.

Blackstone, the brains of law, tells us that in England in 1764 there were 160 offenses punishable by death. Modern law would call most of those offenses not even crimes, but misdemeanors. Reenact that list tomorrow and the census man would have an easy job the next time.

The saddest tale in Boswell's Johnson is that of the Rev. William Dodd, chaplain to the king, popular preacher, almoner and author. Having contracted expensive, licentious habits and fearing exposure, he forged a check, using the name of a former pupil, the Earl of Chesterfield. He felt secure in presuming on the charity of an old friend and pupil.

But Chesterfield prosecuted him without ruth and he was condemned and sentenced to a public execution by hanging. Then he appealed to Dr. Johnson, and the great lexicographer wrote letters for him to the king, the queen and the judge. Also a petition for royal clemency which was signed by 20,000 people in London.

Five thousand dollars was pledged to bribe the jailer to let the condemned man escape and the night before the execution a friend of Dodd walked about the walls of Newgate prison with 500 pounds ($2,500) ready to give to any turnkey to help the man escape.

But Dr. Dodd went to the gallows and died in public ignominy.

The conclusion is that not only has nobody the right to presume, to the point of crime, on the clemency of a friend, but more than that he is 40 varieties of a fool for doing it. Criminology is full of cases of fathers turning their own criminal sons to the mercy of some modern Newgate or Old Bailey.

Thank God we don't live in 1764!
